"Sometimes there are forces too powerful for us to whip them individually, in the time frame that we would like....The best we might be able to do sometimes, is to point out the truth and then step aside. That is where I think you are now. For your own personal safety and survival, step aside."

– Former CIA director William Colby

Foreword

It is very likely that many reading this book will think that the main emphasis is on the possibility of unproven conspiracy theories related to some all-powerful group which has directed the affairs of humanity for some time. The truth is that though this book deals largely with a group referred to variously as the Power Elite, the Global Elite, the Illuminati, or something else along those lines, ultimately, this book has been written to point out that God is in control. Of that there is no doubt.

We know from the Bible that Satan exists and we know that he was very likely the most intelligent and powerful of all created beings. We also know that in spite of Satan's power and intelligence, God controls him.

Whatever plans and purposes Satan seeks to bring to fruition are only allowed by God's will. Those plans of Satan that are not allowed to succeed by God fail. In fact, even those plans that God allows, in the final analysis, fail as well.

This book is about the very real possibility that Satan has collected to himself (and works through) a group of human beings that are dedicated to his ways and purposes for this planet. Their loyalty to him seems to know no bounds, yet in the end, they do have limits because they are human...and fallen. They live and die and the torch is passed to others in these family lines that carry on where others left off.

I believe with the re-election of Mr. Obama, our nation will continue the downward spiral of out-of-control debt and spending that will lead to a financial meltdown. It seems to be something that God is allowing because of where the Bible tells us this world will be during the End Times, times I fully believe we are living in now.

The world needs to arrive to a point where a total collapse will bring about a new world order, an order that brings with it a new currency and a new way of doing things. That new way is really a melding together of two old ways. It will be a two-tiered system that combines socialism and capitalism.

Those at the very top of the system will enjoy the full benefits of capitalism without any of the competition. Those beneath that level will live their lives as serfs on the manor, with socialism the foundation of their daily lives.

Once the world becomes one in purpose and direction, it will truly be one. From there and for manageability, it will – according to Daniel 7 and Revelation 17 – be divided up into ten parcels, with one person ruling each parcel.

It will be at that point that Antichrist will make his move and step out of the shadows. He will quickly dominate and rule as absolute imperial dictator and will represent the final world kingdom before Jesus returns.

It almost seems as though forces far greater than ourselves are literally pushing us along toward that time, and I believe that's true. Those dark forces have been working through humanity to accomplish Satan's goals since the days of Nimrod.

The next few years will likely prove to be ones that remove all possibility of trusting in human government or ourselves. If you are an authentic Christian, then the only advice I have for you is to learn to trust God Himself for your care. That doesn't mean you do nothing to help yourself or your family. It simply means that God is our Father. He will provide. He will help us through the time ahead.

Trust Him. Lean on Him. Submit yourself to Him. Praise Him for your life and for each day. Expect Him to work in and through you in order that His purposes will be accomplished. God loves you immensely and He yet has people to save from Satan's kingdom into God's marvelous Kingdom of Light. He plans to use each of His authentic children for that purpose.

Pray that God would give you a forehead as hard as Ezekiel's (cf. Ezekiel 3:8) so that this world will not only be not able to offer you any temptation that would move you away from Him, but that you would also fear nothing in the world either. Remember, God controls all things.

Power Elite & New World Order, Pt 1

Let me say right at the outset that there are many people who believe that the concept of a new world order is absolute hogwash. They do not believe it can happen and they relegate it to the area of conspiracy. They simply cast it off as the result of raving lunatics. For them, the raving lunatics are often Christians who, they believe, are given to flights of fancy and too many conspiracy theories.

I believe knowledge is power and those who are fully informed are in the best place to make informed decisions. I firmly believe Americans have been duped. I have been duped, believing that truth is found in either of our two political parties. It's a set-up in which we are made to think that the parties are different from one another, when in truth, they appear to be working toward the same goal.

Do you think that this is simply conspiratorial thinking by a few deluded individuals? You may wish to think again because there have been and continue to be a multitude of world leaders who have done whatever they could to revolutionize the world to reflect a system they believe is best for the world.

As just one example, in his book from 2002 titled simply Memoirs, David Rockefeller wrote the following: *"Some even believe we are part of a secret cabal working against the best interests of the United States, characterizing my family and me as 'internationalists' conspiring with others around the world to build a more integrated global political and economic structure – one world, if you will. If that's the charge, I stand guilty, and I am proud of it."*¹

Was Rockefeller kidding or was his arrogance getting the best of him so that he absolutely delighted in admitting what many thought was true anyway? I believe the latter, and by the year 2002, it was already way too late to turn back the hands of time to undo what this "secret cabal" had already done.

One of the basic tenets of those working toward a new world order made up of a two-tiered structure of capitalism (at the top) and socialism (for everyone below that), is that there will be a general distribution of wealth so that the "have nots" will enjoy at least some of the wealth of the "haves." Of course, it goes without saying that those of the true upper echelon (top tier) will continue to enjoy their full wealth as well as all the other full benefits of being at the very top of this coming system.

So, if you're reading this and you are one that believes that any thought or mention of a new world order comes from people with severely overworked imaginations and misguided religious zeal, then all I can say is that you should probably read no further. This book is not for you.

New World Order?

The belief in, and the movement toward a new world order, where every nation gives up its own national sovereignty in favor of something deemed greater - a global sovereignty - has been around for decades and generations. It is not a new concept. It simply appears to be a new concept because people have not been paying attention, since a good deal of warning and concern regarding a new world order - aka a one world government - has been largely discussed by Christians and conservatives, and honestly, who can trust these folks to be level-headed and sober-minded?

Satan is not a moron. He is the most intelligent creature God ever created, based on what we know about him, his fall, and the way he works in this world. People either believe that he exists or they don't. I have yet to hear someone say "Well, I'm not sure if Satan actually exists. I tend to believe there is something there, but I'm not sure what." This sentiment is used in response to whether or not someone believes in God, not Satan.

Satan? Who?

Most people - outside of Christianity - do not believe in Satan at all. They believe evil stems from the choices that people make and because of that, they also believe that people can be taught or trained to make the correct decisions. Of course, they prefer to use relative truth (an oxymoron to be sure) that they define in order to accomplish that. It's foolhardy because relative truth is always changing, and therefore is not truth at all. Relative truth means there is never a solid foundation upon which to build. Is it any wonder then that society is what it has become now?

Conversely, God's truth is absolute, though of course the majority disagrees with that. Since God's truth never changes, the foundation is always solid. Again, people who do not believe in God obviously do not believe that there is any truth that is solidly absolute. If there is no truth that is absolute, then the next best thing is relative truth, which as we have stated, is always changing based on new information and really is not truth at all.

Absolute vs. Relative

The idea that there is absolute truth is roundly rejected by most because they believe the concept stems purely from dogmatic and narrow-minded people. If a person is, therefore, not a Christian, the idea of absolute truth is extremely easy to reject. A hidden group known as the Power Elite – what some call the Global Elite, the Hidden Cabal, or what have you – believes in relative truth.

Their relative truth comes from Satan himself. They do not recognize Satan to be someone Jesus called the “father of lies” in John 8:44. No, they don't even call him Satan. To them, he is Lucifer and he is the one who allegedly wants human beings to be free.

The Power Elite (PE) believes that it is not the Judeo-Christian God who wants men and women free by providing them the absolute truth that can save us from ourselves. They believe this God is a dictator, someone who has been at odds with Lucifer for eons, and they also believe that Lucifer will, in the end, win the day.

Because of this, they have willingly and knowingly submitted to him as their lord and believe they gain tremendous favor from him because of it. The PE also believes that when Lucifer comes into his future physical kingdom here on earth, their reward will be great.

I am going to do my best to keep this chapter short. I know that people in general have short attention spans, and by the way, that is something that is a deliberate byproduct of our societal interests, values, and mores. People have a very difficult time paying attention for any real length of time because over the decades, we have been trained (without realizing it) to not focus on things for any length of time. It's been happening through music, videos, TV, and especially movies over the years.

The frenetic pacing of many of these things has actually helped speed up the pacing in society itself. Because of it, people are far more impatient these days. They don't like waiting at all and their attention span is much like the character Sonic in one of those video games.

Dr. Dennis Cuddy

There is only so much I can say to keep this relatively short, yet filled with facts. There is someone readers should become familiar with by the name of Dennis Cuddy. Here is some basic information about Dr. Cuddy for those who have never heard of him.

“Dennis Laurence Cuddy, historian and political analyst, received a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (major in American History, minor in political science). Dr. Cuddy has taught at the university level, has been a political and economic risk analyst for an international consulting firm, and has been a Senior Associate with the U.S. Department of Education.

“Cuddy has also testified before members of Congress on behalf of the U.S. Department of Justice. Dr. Cuddy has authored or edited twenty books and booklets, and has written hundreds of articles appearing in newspapers around the nation, including The Washington Post, Los Angeles Times and USA Today. He has been a guest on numerous radio talk shows in various parts of the country, such as ABC Radio in New *York City, and he has also been a guest on the national television programs USA Today and CBS's Nightwatch."*²

In short, Dennis Cuddy is far from being an idiot by any stretch. He is well-studied and is himself a very educated individual, with an actual PhD. Unlike many, he is not at all given to sensationalizing his articles. He is thorough, given to accurate research. He simply presents the truth of history, documenting it clearly. The reader is left to either reject what is historically proven or agree with it. Those who disagree with it do so because they simply do not like what they read, not that they can actually disagree with what is historically accurate and presented as such.

In successive chapters containing information about the PE and other things related to the coming new world order, I will be quoting from Cuddy and others, as well as of course, referencing Scripture. The reader would do well to take some time to peruse these referenced writings, of which there are many. You will benefit if you are willing to read them with an open mind.

This whole area that we are going to be spending time on is like the belief that voter fraud was part of this most recent election. Even with all of the reports coming in, there are the rabid naysayers who believe that voter fraud could possibly be happening to such a large degree is absolutely ridiculous, as one individual stated on a social network page. The resulting discussion was lively, but he was resolute in his beliefs. Voter fraud was not an issue to him.

I will also say this regarding presidential elections. Have you ever wondered why we seem to go back and forth between parties with nearly each successive election? Seems kind of odd to me, at least it did seem odd. Now, it makes far more sense, and that's only because

I am stepping back and able to see the overall picture instead of simply looking at this part or that part of the puzzle. Viewing the entire picture allows a person to make far more sense of it. Imagine trying to put a puzzle together without ever being able to see what it is supposed to look like when completed. I'm sure it can be done, but how long would it take, since the only thing a person would have to go by is the actual shape of each piece and the partial image on that piece?

Yes, That New World Order

Dennis Cuddy attests to the fact that the PE has literally been around for many centuries, although their actual plan began to be implemented only approximately 350 years ago. By the way, that's long before George Bush, Sr. was even born, for those who are keeping track.

For our purposes, it goes back to a man named Sir William Temple in 1677. Cuddy describes him as a “(a sort of John Jay McCloy PE Agent, who) helped arrange the marriage of William of Orange (Holland) to Princess Mary (heir to the British throne). In 1688 another PE agent Thomas Wharton instigated the Revolution of 1688 replacing James II (a Stuart) with William and Mary as rulers of Britain.”³

What Temple did next is a classic play by the PE, according to Dr. Cuddy. Temple took advantage of a situation that forced the British treasury to borrow quite a lot of money from the Bank of Amsterdam. This was done in order to create massive debt that would be owed to the newly created Bank of England by the British treasury.

Creating debt for sovereign countries is one of the primary tools used by the PE to gain and maintain dominance. This is exactly why our presidents, up to and including Mr. Obama, are all under orders, I believe, to create debt. It doesn't matter if the president is a Republican or Democrat. As mentioned, these are likely two sides of the same coin and have the same goal in mind. Their "hatred" of one another is often a huge joke done purely for the uninformed American who prefers to believe that one party is better than the other. They are the same, simply using different tactics. The goal remains the same for both parties.

Looking to America for Debt Relief

As we move forward from Sir William Temple, we learn that because the British treasury had incurred massive debt, they began looking for ways to eliminate that debt. They eyed newly colonized America to become part of their "taxation" program.

This, as we learn from Benjamin Franklin, is the main reason the Declaration of Independence was created. From that, America was born as a sovereign nation. This did not set well with England, which had planned on relieving itself of its own debt through the taxation and coercion of America. But since America was now a sovereign nation by itself, answering to no one, the PE would do what they could to regain control over America.

What would be used to accomplish this? "The process the PE would use is the dialectic and they created communism as the antithesis to American capitalism."⁴ We will discuss this more in detail in future articles. Simply know that from the beginning, America's sovereignty has been under attack and we are at the point now, I believe, where the PE has full control of the presidency – and in fact, I believe this has been the case for quite some time, dating back to at least 1896. We will get into that.

As we understand more about how the PE works, this becomes all too obvious, at least for the thinking individual. For those who prefer not to believe it, there is no amount of truth - historical or otherwise - that will convince them.

The PE worked diligently to gain control of America through the very same scheme that Sir William Temple promoted with the British treasury: debt to foreign sources. To this end, by the year 1840, the European PE had come into own and therefore controlled a very large portion of the Second Bank of the United States.

By the way, just a few years prior to this, the secret society of Yale, called Skull and Bones, had come to fruition. It is common knowledge to anyone who has studied this group that the Swastika is an integral part of this group. Why the Swastika? The word "Nazi" literally means National Socialism and represents the ideals and values of that group with the Swastika as its symbol. Since the goals of many secret groups are the same as Hitler's, it makes sense that they would use the same symbol. Of course, what they hope and aim to achieve is actually global socialism, and we discuss more on that in an upcoming chapter.

Enter the Rockefellers

It was in the early 1900s when the Rockefellers came to the fore within the PE here in America. Of course, the Rockefellers have always been key people within the Democratic Party, coming out of Ohio mainly. But what have they accomplished here in the United States that has caused this country to move "forward" toward fulfilling the plans and dreams of the PE? Much indeed.

It was not long (around 1911) before Rockefeller and numerous PE notables such as J. P. Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, Vanderbilt, and others were seen "welcoming Karl Marx's 'Socialism' to Wall Street," according to Dennis Cuddy. "Also in 1911, PE agent Col. Edward M.

House's Philip Dru: Administrator was published and referred to a Socialist future to come.”⁵

There are way too many examples of the ideals promulgated through Socialism that became part of the fabric of American society to highlight here in this book, though we will cover a number of them. For further reading, please read many of Dr. Cuddy's articles for greater detail. There have also been many books published on this subject.

The fact becomes clear that throughout America's history until today, socialism has been cleverly hidden away in major aspects of American society, slowly and consistently being foisted on Americans in order to move this nation forward to that idyllic dream of national and then finally global socialism. Why do you think Mr. Obama used the word “Forward” in his campaign for re-election? His original campaign slogan was “Lean Forward” but was shortened over concerns it was too similar to Nazi ideals and slogans.

Alice Bailey

When the global goals are reached, the PE will benefit significantly, as predicted in the writings of occultist Alice Bailey and others. If you take the time to read her many books (and please be careful, as she simply wrote down what was dictated to her by a powerful demon in over 25 books), the PE plan is clearly delineated throughout with a future date of roughly 2025 as the target point where all things come together for the elite of this world. Things appear to be on schedule, and in some ways the goals may well be achieved even before 2025.

As we move forward in America's history, we look back and remember, as most are aware, that the Fed was created in 1913 and became controlled by PE members such as J. P. Morgan. Morgan eventually established (in 1930) the Bank for International Settlements (BIS). This more firmly created a system by which the United States could be much more easily controlled financially.

*“In November 1933, President Franklin Roosevelt wrote to Col. House that they both knew the U.S. government was under the control of ‘a financial element in our larger centers’ ever since the days of President Jackson.”*⁶ This is precisely why so many people are calling for the dissolution of the Fed today. They want America to have her full autonomy back, and that cannot happen with members of the PE controlling the purse strings of America's finances.

Looking back, what becomes even more interesting is how the Nazis controlled the BIS from 1940 to 1946 from Europe. All of these “loose” ends come together neatly when we view the entirety of the PE plan (as much as we are able). We learn a great deal about how the PE has continued to manipulate the world through many things, but one of their most strategic ways is through debt and the control of a nation's finances.

Dr. Cuddy goes onto say, *“Because the PE’s plan involved using National Socialism (Nazism) to bring about the synthesis of capitalism and communism into a world socialist government, the brains of the Nazi movement (Himmler, Bormann, etc.) developed a secret plan to control much of the world’s economy within two generations (about now), and with a continued alliance with the Muslim Brotherhood beginning in the 1930s until today.”*⁷ This plan continues to this day.

A Convoluting Web

Once we see how the many individual strands of the web come together, leading us back to the same source, it is very easy to see the plan and how it impacts every nation, including the United States.

⁶ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis235.htm>

There is also a very distinct link to the major push toward disarmament (globally and certainly within the United States), as well as how the American education system was actually created by godless people who had not only fully bought into the PE's plan, but were members of it.

At the outset, America was a nation that was seen as something that needed to be controlled by the PE if their plan of global domination was to come to fruition. This seems to have been the reason for much of the ills of our society (and those that occur throughout the world), especially as it relates to wars and rumors of wars and the often resultant societal upheaval. It is in these constant attempts by the PE to break America's spirit and economy, along with their attempts to control the direction of America, that they see as the way to achieve their new world order.

So, what can we do? Well, you can continue to buy into the falsehood that the average American has any say in who becomes the next president. You can continue to play the PE's game as they move us toward a global government by voting either Republican or Democrat, or you can reject it by becoming a registered Independent. You can also get involved with groups like The American Precinct, which seeks to help Americans take back control of what happens in our government and therefore our country. Chapter 2

Since this most recent presidential election has come and gone, there has been tremendous frustration experienced by many. In so many ways, it appeared as though Mitt Romney was going to win; not that a Romney win would have benefited America in the long run, but many believe the election was stolen.

However, at least eight political pundits who seemed to be in the know even went out on a limb to predict that scenario. As we now realize, that did not happen, and Mr. Obama was re-elected to the second term as president of the United States.

In the end, it doesn't really matter what happened. It truly doesn't matter if there was voter fraud or if everything was absolutely above board in the big picture. The frustration for many is real and palpable and I will admit that the evening of the election, I grew very frustrated and even angry. I did not sleep much that night and it was not until the next day that I began to see beyond my own frustration. I started asking questions and, of course, looking for answers.

God is in Control - Always

I first realized - once again - that God is absolutely in control. There is no shadow of a doubt about that. There cannot be. Mr. Obama was re-elected, and to say that this was a "mistake" or that God was unable to override it is ridiculous. Either God is fully in control or He isn't in control at all. There is no middle ground. It is impossible for God to be only part way in control of the outcome of things.

Once I realized this anew, I then started to come around to once again understanding that if God was in it, then His purposes will be brought to fruition. Looking back, I fully realize that I was naive in thinking that I could have made a difference in the outcome of the presidential race or that Romney would have been better for America. In actuality, I now see that the outcome of this most recent presidential race - like many before it - was very likely written in stone some weeks, months, or even possibly years ago. Is that possible?

What has led me to that new belief? God utilizes everything that is available to Him to bring His purposes about, including the evil things in society. The Bible is abounding with one example after another that points to this reality. For us and in this period of time, that evil includes the Power Elite (PE) that I spoke about in the previous chapter. In fact, I will be discussing them throughout this book.

Again, let me be clear here in saying that God is fully and completely in control of all outcomes. He allows puny human beings to do what they will in their attempts to overthrow Him and His righteousness or in attempts to sidestep His plans. It is a losing proposition for the PE, though they believe firmly they are on the way to winning. Take the time to read Psalm 2 for God's perspective on humanity's attempts to overthrow Him.

God always gains the glory because none of humanity's (or Satan's) schemes ever come close to dethroning God or taking Him by surprise. This is my thesis statement. It's where I start and end. Either God is in control, or He isn't.

So, if God allows and even uses the things of this world to bring Him glory, then that obviously includes the Power Elite, as I mentioned. He allows them to do what they will do, permitting them to work here or attempt to thwart His purposes there. When He needs to do so, He will raise up individuals whom He has chosen and through which He can work to push them back so that what they seek to accomplish will be kept in check with His purposes and plans.

Societal Changes

When it appears to society as though things are going bad – really bad – it is because God is allowing those things to occur, not necessarily causing them. It is difficult for us to appreciate the difference, but since we know from Scripture that God resides in the eternal present completely outside of time, we can at least somewhat understand that He sees everything from the beginning to the end with all things in between at the same time. This is something that Satan has no ability to do. No other created being can do this - not one! God only (and since Jesus is the Second Person of the Trinity or Godhead, then He, of course, sees it as well).

Again, let's go back briefly to cull from the previous chapter on the subject of the Power Elite and the New World Order, Pt. 1. In it, we learned that the PE is trying to create something globally. Why? They do it for their own benefit entirely. What are the benefits? They are neatly wrapped up in a world socialist government that will come to maturity through what Dr. Dennis Cuddy calls a dialectical synthesis of Western Capitalism and Eastern Communism.

That's a mouthful, which essentially means the blending of two seemingly opposing ideas. In this case, it is referring to capitalism and socialism. We need simply know that the PE's plan is global dominance by creating an entirely new system (from capitalism and socialism) that will apply to the entire globe, including the United States. Once they can bring this about, no individual nation or area of the world will have greater sovereignty than any other. In fact, individual nations as they are today will no longer exist.

God Told Daniel About the PE

This is also noted to occur in the Bible. In the book of Daniel, chapter two, we learn of a statue that has a head of gold, which we are told in the text symbolizes Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar's Kingdom. The chest and arms of silver represent the Medo-Persian Empire that followed Babylon. As we move lower along the statue, we learn that the belly and thighs (or hips) made of brass point to the Grecian Empire headed up by Alexander the Great, which came to the fore following the Medo-Persian Empire. The legs of iron symbolized Rome, the last great empire that dominated the known world then.

Interestingly enough, the feet and especially the toes of the statue represent a kingdom that has not yet appeared on this earth, yet that kingdom is somewhat tied to the Roman Empire. This is due to certain similarities between them, yet the future kingdom is still unique unto itself.

I'm aware that some disagree with this assessment, but in my opinion, their metaphorical explanations based on allegorization of Scripture simply do not pass muster. That's for each person to decide.

Revelation 17:12 tells us, "The ten horns which you saw are ten kings who have not yet received a kingdom, but they receive authority as kings with the beast for one hour." Those ten "horns" (kings/rulers) will come to have a kingdom at some point in the future, though their authority over the earth will not last long. It will be taken from them by the Antichrist.

Ten Toes Equals World Dominance

The ten toes on the feet of the statue speak of a kingdom that is one unit, but represented by ten parts. As the toes on a human foot are all part of the foot, so too the kings that the statue's ten toes point to in the future (Daniel 7; Revelation 17) are still part of that one-world empire that the PE is working toward. They fully believe that they will bring it about, too, and it appears that God, in His Word, *concur*s, allowing them to continue working toward that goal. Through it, though, He will gain complete glory when He destroys it, replacing that Gentile kingdom with His own permanent Kingdom.

In Daniel chapter seven, there is another vision given by God to the prophet Daniel and explained to him by the angelic messenger. In that vision, we see numerous beasts and ten crowns or horns. These ten crowns or horns are referring to the same empire that the ten toes refer to in Daniel 2 (and Revelation 17). There is no difference, except in the way the information is presented to Daniel.

Note in Daniel 7, we learn of the beasts that rise up, yet the fourth beast - completely different from the previous beasts - eventually has ten crowns or horns. This particular beast - representing a future empire - will rise to take over the world. After it has become one in purpose by absorbing and therefore eliminating all other sovereign nations ("It devoured and crushed and trampled down the remainder with its feet; and it was different from all the beasts that were before it, and it had ten horns," Daniel 7:7b), it will break into ten parts, for the sake of manageability, with one person to rule over each part.

Leaders Appointing Leaders

We saw a snapshot of this during the days of the Roman Empire. Since Caesar could not be everywhere at once, he appointed people like Herod and Pontius Pilate to govern specific geographical areas of the world for him, and, of course, they answered to him.

As an aside, I find it interesting that King Herod became the ruler of Judea (under Caesar), though he was not ethnically Jewish. However, he followed Judaism minimally and this has to do with his heritage. His father was an Idumean and his mother was Arab. During the times of the Maccabees, the Judeans conquered Idumea and they were forced to convert to Judaism, which is why Herod was familiar with Judaism: its customs, festivals, and sacrificial system.

In essence, then, it was good for Caesar to have someone like King Herod in charge for him in Judea because of Herod's background and upbringing. He could placate the Jews and speak their language (in more ways than one) and thus had better luck than another person would have had with the Jews. Does this remind you of a specific leader today who says he's a Christian and yet relates very well to Muslims? The PE has chosen wisely.

Incidentally, it is said that when Herod was in Caesar's presence, he preferred following the Roman religion represented by their pagan gods. However, while in Judea, Herod made a public showing of following Judaism and worshiping the God of the Jews. Again, we are reminded of another leader today who seems far more at home with Muslims than with Christians or anyone else, for that matter. He also seems to have a very real disdain for Jews and Israel.

World Dominance

Getting back to this fourth beast, the text states that it literally crushes everything that came before it so that it stands alone. Once it gains world dominance, ten kings will take over the entire earth, with each king maintaining control of one-tenth of the earth, yet the earth in total still represents this one kingdom, and we need to see that.

This is the plan of the PE and it was this plan that God revealed to Daniel several thousand years ago. God was telling Daniel what would occur on this earth during the latter times.

We know that the accuracy of the book of Daniel is uncanny, so much so that so-called higher critics have attacked it relentlessly, doing whatever they can to cast doubt on this book solely because it is so accurate. If everything in Daniel was correct up to and including the Roman Empire, there is absolutely no reason to doubt that what comes after the Roman Empire will also be just as accurate.

When people belittle the idea of a future global government that transcends all other nations by absorbing them, I understand where they are coming from, but I wish they would give it more serious consideration. I realize most people get their information from so many sites on the 'Net and elsewhere, with the abundance of those sources simply sensationalizing everything to the point that things just appear and sound very strange and unbelievable. It all ends up sounding like some screwball conspiracy theory that most intelligent people want no part of.

What I'm telling you about the PE mirrors what God revealed to Daniel (and John regarding Revelation) as well as many other prophets concerning what will happen in the End Times, times I believe we are now in. If you stop to consider it, it makes perfect sense that some-one wants to control the world because there have been many, many dictators who have had the tremendous desire to do just that.

Does anyone doubt Hitler's intent had he not been stopped? We can go back to Genesis 11 to learn about Nimrod who was a "hunter of men" and who, after gaining humanity's full support, proceeded to construct a tower that was to reach the heavens. Was it really going to touch the sky? No, and that's not the point. The point of the tower may simply have been to showcase to God that nothing was beyond the reach of humanity. He agreed and opted to introduce languages at that point in order to create cultures. This effectively put a stop to Nimrod's plans. However, those plans were ultimately Satan's plans, and though Nimrod died eventually, Satan's plans have continued moving this world forward.

New World Order

Returning to our day and the current schemes of the PE, it seems completely logical that there exists a group of exceedingly intelligent, wealthy, and powerful individuals who have come to the realization (via Satan) that exercising full control over all aspects of life is what they need to do. Why? Because ultimately, they believe that they are the only ones worthy of exercising full authority over everyone on earth. If they do not embrace what they believe is their appointed fate, then the masses will simply ruin the earth and there will be nothing left...for them, the PE.

In order to keep that from happening, absolute authority and control over all the earth must occur for the PE to have their coming new world order, which they believe will usher in the final golden age where there will be no problems, because they won't allow any to exist. This is exactly what they think. But in order for this to happen, they must have absolute control over everything. To them it is that simple, and it is because of this belief that we see how they have infiltrated all areas of society in order to bring about their desired ends.

Dr. Cuddy tells us, "In the October 1967 edition of the CFR's FOREIGN AFFAIRS, Richard Nixon wrote of regional arrangements that would evolve into a 'new world order.' This same theme would be picked up by Zbigniew Brzezinski (ZB) at Mikhail Gorbachev's first State of the World Forum in 1995 where ZB declared: 'We cannot leap into world government through one quick step.... The precondition for eventual and genuine globalization is progressive regionalization because by that we move toward larger, more stable, more cooperative units⁸ (emphasis added).

Notice the phrase new world order. Nixon spoke of that in 1967, long before George Bush, Sr. became president and said it publicly. In fact, many leaders have used that phrase numerous times even before Nixon. Bush did not make it up. He was simply parroting the main goal of the PE, of which he is part.

Notice the second sentence highlighted in bold. The PE knows that they cannot achieve their goals quickly or in one fell swoop. It must be done in degrees and even small steps so that the general populace will be hard-pressed to see what's really happening in the big picture. If people wake up to this reality, it becomes much more difficult to secure. By all means, people must be kept in the dark – yet in some sense, it feels as though the PE cannot help but gloat at times, at our expense.

The Big Picture

Have you ever wondered why there are so many films about the future that portray humanity as fully enslaved to one person, one group, or even a society of machines? Think of The Matrix, or the Terminator Saga, or any other movie or book you'd care to think about. So many of them point to a future that is terrible and which nearly always involves human beings fighting against the powers that have gained control over them.

Frankly, I do not believe these movies are simply for entertainment purposes. I truly believe that the PE is so narcissistic that they believe they can shove their plan right in our faces and laugh all the while. They are giving us a type of future report, saying, “This is going to be you!” and loving every moment of it, while they place it before us repeatedly through many venues so that we become numb to it.

In some respects, we are in the Matrix. No, not the one in the movie trilogy, but we are being controlled and directed toward the goals created by the PE. Only those people who realize it can do something about it. Only those people who wake up from their stupor will rise to a new awareness. Knowledge is power. However, how much can be done at this point is debatable.

What people desperately need to see is the big picture. The PE has a way of helping us to focus on individual situations instead, and that alone keeps us from seeing the big picture. So, as a for instance, when James Holmes shoots people in a movie theater in Colorado, the intended response to that is twofold: 1) a renewed call for more anti-gun laws, and 2) a fight against any new gun laws that people are calling to create. Responding to this issue keeps people from seeing the whole picture.

At the same time, the PE is conditioning people to want to be part of a world where guns play no part in it. The real truth of the matter, though, is that even by prohibiting all guns, criminals will still have them. Beyond this, people will make their own weapons when push comes to shove. The PE doesn’t care about this, though. They simply want us conditioned to accept their will.

In the process, people do not realize that what they are reacting to is merely a symptom of a very large problem. That problem stems from the conditioning that has been occurring in society. The real problem is that the PE wants to disarm everyone as well as fulfill many other aspects of their plan as they guide the world toward their one-world global dominance, in which we - the little people - will simply be serfs, while they remain the lords of the manor.

Becoming Issue-Oriented

Focusing on this perceived problem or that one keeps people from seeing the PE's overarching objective. Consider the fact that in today's world, most people are issue-oriented. They will vote for one candidate because he's gay, or because she's firmly pro-choice, or because - you fill in the blank.

This is the work of the PE, because as long as people continue to focus on their pet issue, the world remains marginalized and fractionated. It is exactly what the PE wants because it keeps people from noticing that they (the PE) are busy focusing on all issues at the same time in order to get what they want to have in the end.

Too many people believe that if we could simply make owning guns illegal, for instance, society would be infinitely better off. Someone else believes that if all states would simply ratify same-sex unions, life would be grand. Still others believe that women should be able to obtain free abortions whenever they need one regardless of how far along they are in their pregnancy. The list goes on. Ask yourself, what is your pet issue?

The PE has succeeded in taking truly important things and segregating them into bite-sized separate issues. Take your pick! They're easy to swallow. You can have one issue or more, whichever you choose. People simply choose their issue and that one issue becomes the reason that gives them purpose and they feel good about themselves.

Unfortunately, they don't even see the other issues at all (which together make up the big picture) and have no concern regarding them because they think they are "doing good" by having their one issue. They are merely following the path that the PE has laid out for them, all for the purpose of keeping them in the dark about the big picture, yet the individual believes his or her eyes have truly been opened.

In the end, they are merely focusing on one tiny tree, yet unable to see the forest, and that forest represents all that the PE is involved in throughout society right now. They have their fingers in everything even when, to us, it appears that they are competing against or contradicting themselves. That's only the way it looks to us. Never is this more clearly seen than in the two-party system and the presidential election here in the United States.

Buying a President

I watched a few episodes of the new History Channel series titled “Men Who Built America” recently and realized how interesting they were, for a number of reasons. First, I enjoy learning about history immensely. Always have. Second, much of what I learned from this series confirmed aspects of what I’ve recently read from Dr. Dennis Cuddy with respect to the developments in this country involving Carnegie, Ford, Morgan, and Rockefeller.

It was fascinating to see a number of American titans like J. P. Morgan (Jr.), Rockefeller, and Carnegie deal with building their own financial empires on the backs of the hard-working folks in America. True to form, Morgan and Rockefeller played ruthlessly. Westinghouse was also part of the burgeoning growth of this country, but was overpowered by Morgan.

Originally, Morgan worked with Edison and his DC electricity. Westinghouse began working with Tesla and his AC electricity. Tesla had originally worked with Edison, but as far as Edison was concerned, Tesla was merely one of the people in his employ and Edison did not take any of Tesla's suggestions seriously. Because of this, Tesla eventually quit and went out on his own. That's when Westinghouse stepped in and offered financial backing for Tesla's electricity ideas.

J. P. Morgan

To make a long story short, according to the History Channel series, Morgan played hardball with Westinghouse, forcing him to turn over all the patents to Tesla's work. It was either that or face a huge lawsuit. Westinghouse at that time did not have enough money to go up against Morgan. He would have eventually had to give up because Morgan would have outspent him in a court of law.

Morgan had spent a number of years working with and backing Edison. Once Morgan gained control of Tesla's patents, he was also able to buy controlling stock in Edison General Electric. Having accomplished that, he changed the name to General Electric and fired Edison. Then, he converted GE into a plant that ran on Tesla's AC current. At that point, for Morgan it seemed as though the sky was the limit.

Morgan then did something else to make even more money. This seemed to be a recurring theme throughout, by the way. It was what these rich men lived for - to become even wealthier. Morgan took his companies and figured out ways to make them more profitable. He did so by firing a good percentage of his labor force. Those who remained worked longer hours for less pay.

Conditions in these companies were often described as abysmal. It was not uncommon for steelworkers to die while at work because of the consistently unsafe conditions. None of that mattered to the men who owned these companies. Their goal was to gain as much wealth, power, and control as possible. It was capitalism gone sadly awry.

Eventually, of course, the government of the United States got these men in their sights and even began suing them to try to break up their monopolies. One up-and-comer, William Jennings Bryan, was running for the Democratic candidate for the president of the United States. He spoke vehemently against Morgan, Rockefeller, and Carnegie. This, of course, concerned these men so much that they actually decided to join forces against Bryan.

Buying a President

This is where it really gets interesting. The History Channel shows the men at a table trying to figure out what to do. Carnegie points out that Bryan would surely gain the Democratic nomination for president. Another person at the table notes that the Republicans would have a good candidate as well. At that point, J. P. Morgan says this: “No, we will buy a president.” Fascinating.

This is exactly what they did. They looked around the country and settled on William McKinley, governor of Ohio. At once they began pouring a good deal of money into McKinley's campaign while remaining cleanly in the background.

These men had resources that others did not. They owned newspapers or were able to use financial influence to get their articles and headlines into newspapers. They began a campaign against Bryan by attempting to paint him as a religious zealot (he was Presbyterian) who would impose his religious ideals and zeal on Americans. The papers also said he would shut down businesses.

*"Keep in mind that many of the big city newspapers were owned by the same elite cartel that were advocating for an increased role for the Federal government in the daily affairs of the average American. Of course, they were going to commit libel against the most public opponent of the Progressive agenda. It wasn't the residents of the big cities that Jennings was at odds with, but certain individuals and various special interest groups who just happened to choose the big cities as gathering places."*⁹

Democrats had been in control of Congress for the previous four years and were largely being blamed for the severe economic downturn at the time. Because of this, Bryan had an uphill battle to fight as a Democrat himself.

Progressivism of 1896

This period of time is either largely unknown or not remembered as the era of "progressivism" in America's history. The progressives in this case were the elite Republicans like Morgan, Rockefeller, Carnegie and others. They stood against those who wanted to break up their monopolies.

*"[What] should be obvious [is] the Rockefeller-Morgan connections throughout this whole Progressive Movement. What had happened was business had become increasingly competitive in the late 19th - early 20th century. Morgan and Rockefeller beginning with railroads and oil attempted to establish cartels. But the free-market spirit and public distrust of monopolies in addition to central banking fouled up these attempts. So they managed to hoodwink the masses using the same language of opposition to monopoly as a way to put over monopoly."*¹⁰

This, in my opinion, is what we are seeing today; however, it is now the Democrats who are calling themselves progressives. Yes, they want to make it appear as though the Republicans favor the rich and couldn't care less about the average American.

This is nonsense because as I've pointed out previously, there are plenty of ultra-rich Democrats in Congress who show no sign of any type of willingness to give up even part of their wealth to help this country. Remember Michael Moore?

During J. P. Morgan's time, Morgan himself was in a position to loan the Federal government huge sums of money. He considered it a form of nationalism by doing so, even though he was rewarded handsomely in the form of interest paid back on the loan. Such was the life of these extremely wealthy men in those days, with no one to keep them in check.

Bryan Portrayed as a Right-Winger

Regarding the presidential race between Bryan and McKinley, the powers that be in Morgan, Rockefeller, and Carnegie did whatever they could to bring about a win for McKinley. In order for them to continue with business as usual, they needed someone in the White House who would essentially do what was in their best interests.

"One of Morgan's protégés was Henry Cabot Lodge. Lodge basically acted as a middle man for Morgan as backstage negotiations were being conducted with the Rockefeller political machine operating out of Ohio. The main contact for the Rockefeller camp was William McKinley's campaign manager Mark Hanna.

*"The basic agreement was that Morgan would throw his support to William McKinley in exchange for certain concessions on establishing a central banking structure in the future."*¹¹ Remember the concept of keeping nations in debt?

¹¹ <http://chrisforliberty.wordpress.com/category/u-s-history/>

All of this took place in 1896 and, of course, Bryan lost. He garnered 176 electoral votes to McKinley's 271. However, the popular vote was much closer. Part of the reason for the win was that Morgan, et al, broadcast the claim that if Bryan won, plants would close the next day because they would not be able to remain in business under Bryan. As a worker in one of these factories, it became clear that even though with your heart, you wanted Bryan to win, it seemed as though to remain employed, you needed McKinley to win.

Has the Power Elite Stopped Buying Presidents?

Ask yourself a question here. If the alliance of J. P. Morgan (Jr.), Rockefeller, and Carnegie could literally buy a president, ultimately gaining control of what that president did, is it difficult to believe that the very same thing could be happening today?

I think that once this occurred in American history, we simply have to ask, why would those in power ever stop exercising control over who gains the highest office in the land? Obviously, with this one very real example in America's history about three extremely powerful men who bought a president, it seems to me that the practice has very likely continued from that point onward.

Many things have changed within America over the years. The Democratic and Republican parties have changed their foundational beliefs and platforms, but they both still attack candidates from the other side of the aisle unmercifully.

In many ways, though, it appears to me that Democrats and Republicans have become little more than opposite sides of the same coin. Is it all for show?

Since the re-election of Mr. Obama, I have noticed a good deal of "tough talk" in the media coming from the GOP side of the aisle. I have seen and heard people like McCain and Graham blaming the president for the Benghazi fiasco. I have seen legislation moving forward that will make it an impeachable offense if Mr. Obama side-steps Congress again in the use of the military.

Everyone seems to be doubling down and sounding really tough. But tell me, where was this before the election? Did no one besides the Obama administration know of the impending layoffs that are bound to shake this country to its economic core? Why was there so little support by Boehner and others in Congress for “Fast and Furious”? Why was Benghazi so easily forgotten and Hurricane Sandy allowed to become front page news by the press instead?

Now, it appears as though some in Congress want to get tough with the president, and even the news media is acting like it has all of a sudden grown a backbone. Why now?

That's easy to explain. Mr. Obama has been re-elected and nothing can or will be done about that (voter fraud allegations notwithstanding). So why does the rancor and visible tension exist now among those in Congress?

It seems clear that others in Congress will have to worry about their own re-elections, won't they? They will point to these times when they talked tough, when they stood for justice and truth against an administration they believed was covering up and lying to the American people. They could have done that before the election, but they chose not to do so.

J. P. Morgan, Rockefeller, and Carnegie literally bought a president in 1896. I think it is quite believable to say that the practice has continued from that point onward until today, but that cannot be proven.

I'm convinced that if these three men had been able to find a way to cheat through voter fraud, they would have done so. Instead, they had to sweat out the evening for roughly 20 hours before they would know if all of their money and efforts brought their candidate into the Oval Office. Morgan's idea to buy a president worked well.

J. P. Morgan Still Going Strong

Is the J. P. Morgan camp still a viable entity today? It would seem so. In fact, one very recent report highlights the fact that J. P. Morgan has made quite a bit of money off the EBT cards issued to Welfare recipients. *"A new report by the Government Accountability Institute finds that JP Morgan has made at least $560,492,596 since 2004 processing the Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) cards of 18 of the 24 states it has under contract for the food stamp program."*¹²

That's over half a billion dollars; quite a bit of money made from a government program, isn't it? I'm certainly not saying that Welfare should be eliminated for those truly in need. However, the waste needs to go, but I cannot imagine the government clamping down on that anytime soon; though, as we noted, beginning January of 2013, Welfare recipients will receive $50 less each month from that point forward.

The article I've quoted with respect to J. P. Morgan goes on to quote a source from within the bank. *"We are the largest processor of food stamps in the country...[the EBT program] is a very important business to JP Morgan. It's an important business in terms of its size and scale.... Right now volumes have gone through the roof in the past couple of years or so. The good news from JP Morgan's perspective is the infrastructure that we built has been able to cope with that increase in volume."*¹³ J. P. Morgan has a lot to lose if the Welfare rolls decrease, and by keeping Mr. Obama in, they are guaranteed this won't happen.

Many have pondered why the ranks of Welfare recipients have skyrocketed as they have done during Mr. Obama's first term. We now know that the more people who are on the Welfare rolls, the more money certain industries make.

We've spoken a good deal about J. P. Morgan (Jr.) and how he worked in 1896 to secure a president that would work for the rich man. Are those who control J. P. Morgan now simply getting "payback" for helping to put and keep Mr. Obama in office? It would seem that way, but the fact that this has been going on since at least 2004 tells us that they have benefitted under other presidents as well.

In the same article, we learn that "JP Morgan's political donations to members of the House and Senate Agriculture Committees (who oversee the food stamp program) skyrocketed once the bank entered the EBT market."¹⁴ The article also notes that one of every seven Americans receives tax-payer funded food stamps. That number is only going to increase over the next few years.

President McKinley Paves the Way

Once McKinley became elected, it was a boon for three of the richest men in America. Yes, there were problems, but they were not insurmountable because they had a candidate of like mind in the White House, someone who would go to bat for them. Why on earth would anyone give that up and stop buying presidents after that? It makes no sense at all.

It is likely the very sad reality that within politics, Americans have not truly had an authentic say in who becomes president since 1896. We have only been allowed to believe that we have had a say, but we have really been kept in the dark. Now, the cat may be out of the bag with this latest election and the apparent obviousness of voter fraud that was part of it. There are many, however, who do not believe that voter fraud played any real part in the election. Unless those in authority look into it with an unbiased frame of mind, we'll never know, will we?

When I listen to politicians speak now, I find it difficult not to laugh. Either they're protesting too much or not enough. I believe all of it has to do with whether their re-election is near or far.

They know that the American people are very easily persuaded and even duped. They know that there are powers that seek to line the pockets of many in order to gain political favors, and there are too many people in this world who are willing to have their pockets lined. For every one that is caught, there are plenty of others who never get caught.

The Bible tells us how illegal and unethical deals were often made behind the scenes and out of earshot of the average person. Of course, God always sees these deals, and He has a way of stopping them if they are not in line with the perfection of His will. We see this take place in the book of Esther, as merely one example, when Haman came up with a plan to eradicate the Jews by trying to convince Ahasuerus to kill Mordecai and all the rest of the Jews. His plan is revealed to Esther, who is able to turn the tables on Haman.

There are many examples of this type of thing occurring in the Bible. Sometimes, God allows the plan to succeed, while at other times, He brings it to a dead stop. It all has to do with His will and His purposes.

At some future point, the Antichrist will move onto the world's stage. He is described as the 8th horn and the 11th horn, depending upon the passage of Scripture that is being referenced. What is fascinating is that once this world becomes one in purpose and in government throughout the globe, it is partitioned into ten parts, each ruled by one individual. When this happens, the Antichrist will step out of the shadows and make a quick rise to the top.

Politics is often filled with vitriolic rhetoric. Many times, politicians are charged with crimes that land them in jail. Either they accepted bribes or they misused the power of their office in other ways that were illegal or unethical. In some cases, there have been whispers of violence and even murder associated with certain politicians. It is true that power can and does corrupt people. I think if we could pull back the veil that keeps us from seeing just exactly how corrupt many politicians are within our government it would likely shock us into a stupor. I cannot imagine once having tasted what it's like to be a Senator, a Representative, or the president, with the power that goes with that territory, to then go back to life as a normal, average citizen. Is it any wonder that many of these individuals are often working deals in the shadows?

Antichrist

The Antichrist will do whatever it takes to embrace his lofty position, and that includes murder. Daniel 7:7-8 says, "After this I saw the night visions, and behold, a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, exceedingly strong. It had huge iron teeth; it was devouring, breaking in pieces and trampling the residue with its feet. It was different from all the other beasts before it, and it had ten horns."

"I was considering the horns, and there was another horn, a little one, coming up among them, before whom three of the first horns were plucked out by the roots. And there, in this horn, were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking pompous words."

Note the sections I've placed in bold. This little horn steps onto the scene and then destroys three of the ten horns that were in power. That leaves seven horns, and those horns give their full allegiance to the little horn, which is the eleventh in this case, but after killing three of the original horns, he becomes the eighth.

Revelation 17:12-13 explains it this way: "The ten horns which you saw are ten kings who have not yet received a kingdom, but they receive authority as kings with the beast for one hour. These have one purpose, and they give their power and authority to the beast."

Again, I've placed in bold part of the text that mirrors what we learn in Daniel 7. The kings actually give their power and authority to the beast (the little horn of Daniel 7) so that they can remain in their positions. But they appear to be powerless after that, simply kings in name only.

This is politics at its worst, and one day the world will be the stage upon which these scenarios are played out in full. The Antichrist will rise when the time is right to become absolute imperial ruler of the earth. Others will have done the hard part. They will have moved global society to a place where global socialism exists for the average person, while the leaders will continue to enjoy the full benefits of capitalism without restraint.

The many groups that exist today like Greenpeace and other "green" groups that emphasize Mother Earth over people, or PETA, that emphasizes animals over people, or any other group that seeks to lower the importance of humanity to preserve the earth's resources, is simply a front for the enemy's work. I'm not saying that it's not good to conserve energy or resources. We should do that, and by doing so, we become good stewards of what God has given us.

Turning it Upside Down

The problem, though, is that many of these groups are doing whatever they can to turn God's Creation upside down by devaluing humanity. We are the crown of God's Creation, not the bottom of it. We are to subdue the earth and use the resources that God gave us. However, we have been taught for decades that we must preserve resources for future generations, even though those resources could be used now to save the lives of millions in third world countries.

The elite does not want to save millions of lives. In fact, they want the earth's population to be seriously reduced from its current state of 7 billion to right around 500 million globally. All of what is being foisted upon us and fed to us constantly is because the elite see a world in which they rule and they benefit. When we hear organizations talking about conserving resources for future generations, they are unknowingly referring to the future generations of the elite, not the average citizen.

Once they have done everything needed to create a global society that exists under the terms of socialism, they will soon after that see their own new world taken from them by one who comes to desolate. The Antichrist will rise to forcefully take from them what they have spent generations and generations creating. While they may think they are going to welcome Lucifer as leader of this bold, new world, in reality, Lucifer/Satan has his own plans.

Once the elite create this coming new frontier globally, Antichrist will rise to power by eliminating three of the top elite. Instead of bowing before their god, Lucifer, they will be forced to answer to one who ultimately comes from their own ranks. It will be a rude awakening for them as we just learned that three of these ten rulers will be killed so that Antichrist will gain absolute authority.

I truly believe that at that point in the future, when all of this happens, they will start to wonder what they have really brought about. Of course, by then, it will be way too late and they will be faced with two choices: 1) to fall in behind the Antichrist, or 2) to reject him outright. Obviously, the second choice will not turn out well for whoever chooses that route.

These are the same two choices that will be offered to the world by the time the middle of the Tribulation arrives and he seats himself in the Holy of Holies in the rebuilt Jewish Temple and declares himself to be god. From that point on, every person will worship him or be executed. This is what the elite is bringing this world to, and don't think for a moment that they will escape culpability as far as God is concerned.

God will allow these things to occur because He will be able to show the entire world upon His return that He, and He alone, is God. No one stands before Him. Not people and not the Antichrist. When Jesus returns, He will demonstrate to the entire globe instantly that Antichrist is no match for Him. Jesus will gain the glory.

Power Elite & New World Order, Pt. 3

National Socialism as envisioned by the Power Elite (PE) is largely being created in the United States (and the world) by modern-day fascists who believe in private enterprise that comes under the control of the government. *"Fascists seek to unify their nation based on commitment to a nation-state where its individuals are united together as one people through their national identity."*¹⁵

Beyond this, "fascism advocates a state-controlled and regulated mixed economy; the principal economic goal of fascism is to achieve

*autarky [the quality of being self-sufficient] to secure national self-sufficiency and independence, through protectionist and interventionist economic policies. It promotes regulated private enterprise and private property contingent whenever beneficial to the nation and state enterprise and state property whenever necessary to protect its interests. It supports criminalization of strikes by employees and lockouts by employers because it deems these acts as prejudicial and detrimental to the nation as a whole.”*¹⁶

Dr. Dennis Cuddy thoroughly discusses the plan for global domination conceived by the PE and their use of Nazism's goals, as well as the Muslim Brotherhood, over the years. The two entities are interconnected still, even though Hitler is dead and most would argue that the remnants of Nazism are primarily kept alive only by small but extreme groups called Neo-Nazis today.

Muslim Brotherhood & Mr. Obama

Because the Muslim Brotherhood has played such a huge role for the PE for decades, is it any wonder that the PE's choice for president during this day is Mr. Obama? He is a man who is both sympathetic to Islam and can well understand the Muslim mindset because of his background and upbringing. Whether he actually is a Muslim or not does not even really matter, though for me, it was a serious point of concern for a while. Not any longer. I was focusing on an issue.

Now, after understanding much more about the PE, how they work, and who they work with to accomplish their goals of global dominance, the fact that Mr. Obama is the president of the United States seems the perfect choice as far as the PE is concerned. I no longer question why or how he came to power. It's simply a matter of pragmatism and logical business decisions for the PE and nothing more. They continue to move forward. God allows it.

Mr. Obama's Background

Mr. Obama has an extensive background regarding Islam, having grown up with Muslims in Indonesia. He can relate to them and understands the Qur'an as well as the Muslim mindset. He is very comfortable among Muslims, and many Muslims within Islam firmly believe he is one of them. Whether Mr. Obama is or is not a true Muslim makes no difference.

He is like King Herod of old, who was equally comfortable with being part of the Jewish ceremonies and participating in Temple practices while in Jerusalem or with participating in the pagan Roman practices while in Rome. It didn't matter to Herod at all. I don't think it matters to Mr. Obama at all. I don't really believe that religion itself matters to Mr. Obama. In the end, he likely believes himself to be a god, as most of those within the PE believe of themselves. We see that as narcissistic. To them, it is simply a fact they have come to understand.

Mr. Obama simply needs to be able to relate to both Christians and Muslims because the PE knows that here in America the most difficult people to reach and overcome are authentic Christians. There are plenty of professing Christians and even people who very likely sincerely believe they are Christian who have embraced Mr. Obama. They accept him and have no reservations about his self-admitted Christianity.

The problem is that many of us have been focusing on Mr. Obama's religion, and I was one of them. Guilty as charged. Now I realize that this is simply another misdirection of the PE. That, along with his birth certificate issue and the many other things that we do not know about the man, has absolutely nothing to with anything.

I am not saying that these are not important issues, and let's face it, if he is not eligible to be president, then that would mean treason and prison. But can you imagine the reaction of many blacks in society if that were to happen? That's not going to happen, at least as long as Mr. Obama dutifully plays the game. If he fails or becomes too big for his britches, then the PE could use that as a means of extortion (Gen. Petraeus comes to mind).

Right now, however, they are getting what they want, because part of society is fixated on his qualifications and his religion. Not me; not anymore. Part of society is doing exactly what the PE wants them to do instead of looking where they should be looking in order to see more of the whole picture.

Do you categorically believe the PE is that stupid that they would deliberately elect a man into the Oval Office who could turn out to be a fraud? Even if he is a fraud, none of that will come out, no matter how hard anyone tries to make it happen. There are many examples throughout history proving that the PE plays for keeps. They are not above using extortion, coercion, or even murder to accomplish their goals. I have absolutely no doubts about that whatsoever.

Mr. Obama may not be eligible to be president, and the PE wants us to focus on that so that we will miss the larger picture. Isn't it fascinating? They don't care about the rule of law. They care only about doing what they want to do, and they all believe that they are completely above every law that man has ever created. They are the gods of the coming new world order, who will all bow to Lucifer, the greater god, at least to their way of thinking.

In any case, even if Mr. Obama is ineligible, we will never be able to prove it, unless, as I said, he screws up royally. That would be an absolute last resort, though, because it would not merely affect Mr. Obama, but many people associated with him who would be guilty of having hidden that information. The PE would have to take all things into consideration before making that move or allowing it to happen.

The PE's Perfect President

Regarding Mr. Obama, Cuddy makes these statements: *"In following the PE's strategy of using a dialectical process via regionalization to achieve a World Socialist Government, Barack Obama was elected president in 2008. With his Muslim background, he would be able to relate to the Muslim revolutionary uprisings in North Africa and the Middle East beginning in 2011. He made presidential overtures to the Muslim Brotherhood (MB) from the beginning of his administration. And as the MB was the leading organizational structure in these revolutions, they would be in a unique cross-country position to facilitate the regionalization of the nations involved."*¹⁷

By the way, Cuddy also alludes to the issue of the Arab Spring and the rise of what are supposed to be "democracies" that replaced dictatorships. For most of us though, we look at their so-called democracies now and we see them as nothing at all like the democracy that is used in the United States of America. Cuddy points out that this doesn't matter. What matters is that the old dictatorial regimes are gone (or going), replaced with something akin to a democracy. Once the dust settles with any type of democracy in place controlled by one group (the Muslim Brotherhood), these nations are then much more vulnerable to losing their sovereignty as they become part of the global dominance sought by the PE.

To us here in the United States, much of what has been transpiring in North Africa (Egypt, Tunisia, Libya, etc.) seems rigged and appears to be far worse than what existed before the overthrow of individual nations there. It certainly may have been rigged, but it really does not matter how it seems to us.

The truth of the matter is that as far as the PE is concerned, those countries are far more vulnerable now, and therefore, that places the

¹⁷ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis236.htm>

PE in a much better position to seize the day by absorbing those nations at some point in the future. They will all need financial resources, correct? They will all need to borrow money, correct?

Word is that Morsi's new Egyptian government is almost completely out of money. In swoops the PE and who do you think is there to represent the PE for this purpose? America. One recent article states that Mr. Obama announced to Congress (on September 28, 2012) that the Federal government “would provide Egypt’s new government an emergency cash infusion of $450 million, but the aid immediately encountered resistance from a prominent lawmaker wary of foreign aid and Egypt’s new course under the leadership of the Muslim Brotherhood.”¹⁸

Apparently, this is part of the $1 billion dollars that the Obama administration had previously pledged to the Egyptian government to help with their transition to a “democracy” under Morsi. The great tragedy here is that apparently our government thinks it has lots of money to provide to other nations, while those at home here in the United States suffer great financial stress.

Mitt Romney noted (regarding simply handing out money) the following: “A temporary aid package can jolt an economy,’ he said. ‘It can fund some projects. It can pay some bills. It can employ some people some of the time. But it can’t sustain an economy — not for long. It can’t pull the whole cart, because at some point the money runs out.”¹⁹ It is not a permanent fix, and what’s more, that money could have gone a long way in providing relief and assistance here.

One can only wonder how this type of expenditure can be logically justified if we consider the amount of debt the United States owes to China. *“The Treasury Department estimates that our debt to China is approximately $1.16 trillion.”*²⁰ That’s a lot of money. Yet, apparently, we have plenty of money to give/loan to other countries?

If we ran our own personal budgets like our government does, it’s clear we would be in bankruptcy. Instead, our government simply keeps moving along. Isn’t anyone who can do anything about it concerned about the massive amount of debt that we owe to foreign countries?

Yet we continue to not only give away money to other foreign countries, but we also continue borrowing money every day to meet our own obligations.²¹ This is nuts, but the current administration shows no sign of slowing down when it comes to spending. It’s kind of like paying down one credit card by taking cash advances from another one.

Mr. Obama has also recently announced that he is allocating $6 billion dollars of tax payer money to focus on clean energy. Oh, but wait, that’s going to be spent in Asia, not here at home.²² Ultimately, *“The White House estimates $9 trillion in investment for electricity will be needed through 2035 to meet the increasing demand in the region, which offers potential for U.S. industry.”*²³ From where is it coming?

Some of this money will be in the form of loans that will hopefully offer a return on the investment. One can only hope.

Breaking America's Back

Since taking office, the Obama administration has unfortunately seemed far more concerned about activities overseas and has proven it by dumping untold billions of tax payer dollars into overseas projects and governments while doing virtually nothing to help the American economy or those out of work.

Of course, because of the plans of the PE, this type of redistribution of wealth truly applies more toward individual countries than people, so it becomes obvious that this is what is meant by redistribution of wealth. It's not concern for the individual (capitalism), but concern for the state/nation (socialism).

Jeb Bush and the Phoenix in 2016? Really?

Please note this next quote very carefully, all right? Is Cuddy just making things up as he goes along? Is he spinning his wheels just to make noise? What is he doing?

"Obama as president could also move the U.S. increasingly toward socialism, which would be necessary for an eventual 'comfortable merger' with other socialist regions such as Europe and Latin America. Therefore, he may be re-elected (with an 'October Surprise') in November 2012." [This from article Cuddy wrote in June of 2012 - Ed.]

"[Obama] could be followed as president by Jeb Bush 2016 in time to accept the 'Phoenix' as the new world currency planned for 2018. And if Jeb Bush is re-elected in 2020, the new president would begin term of office in 2025, the year by which

*Luciferian occultist Alice Bailey proclaimed the 'World Federation of Nations' would be 'taking rapid shape,' according to 'the Plan'."*²⁴ (emphasis added)

Take a moment to re-read that, all right? I'll wait. Good, now notice that he mentions Jeb Bush as possible president in 2016. He also notes that as far as the PE is concerned, there is to be the inauguration of a new global currency called the Phoenix. Wow, that's fascinating. Hey, isn't that what's on the U.S. one dollar bill? Yep. It's not an eagle, folks. It's a phoenix, rising from the ashes and flames.

The idea of the "phoenix" as a new world currency was broached in 1988 by the magazine The Economist (previous page). Since then, of course, people have pooh-poohed the idea that this will occur and they point to the uprisings and instability of areas of Europe in their attempts to prove the point. Personally, I think they are missing valuable insight because they discount the idea that there is a group of individuals behind the process that has been moving this world toward that future time when it will become one.

It would be pretty difficult to make this stuff up without sounding like a complete moron, wouldn't it? I'm quite certain Dr. Cuddy realizes just how conspiratorial all of his comments sound, but his articles and books are filled with solid documentation. He goes into more detail regarding Jeb Bush as well. He's not simply pulling a name out of thin air for the sake of it.

If what Dr. Cuddy is telling us about Mr. Obama and Jeb Bush potentially following him as president in 2016 is true, doesn't that tell us that the PE has full and absolute control of the presidency and who takes up residence in the White House for four years at a pop? It might.

²⁴ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis236.htm>

Consider that we had Reagan, followed by Bush, Sr., followed by Clinton, followed by Bush, Jr., followed by Obama, and then possibly followed by yet another Bush. It just goes back and forth, doesn't it?

But then, Mr. Obama was slid into the mix, a man who represented minorities, and as such, the race card could be played as often as possible. Sounds like the PE is losing patience and they want to get this whole one-world government thing going. Again, as God permits.

By the way, somewhat related to this, I read a report stating that the entire city of Philadelphia came in with 99% of all votes for Mr. Obama. I suppose that's possible, but when I lived in Philadelphia for four years a number of years ago there were plenty of Republicans and conservatives at the time. Did they pack up and leave?

I'm supposed to believe that nearly 100% of the people in Philly voted Democrat, for Mr. Obama? That seems ridiculous to me. He's president for a second term because the PE made him president. They have too much to lose to let their carefully crafted plans go awry. They have also poured too much money into getting Mr. Obama into the Oval Office.

Every one of the presidents noted above (with the exception, of course, of Jeb Bush) has done (or is doing) their part to move this nation forward toward the idealism that is part and parcel of the PE plan. Jeb Bush will be no different.

Every crisis - real or imagined - has been foisted upon the American public (and in some cases, the entire world) to help move us along the road toward National Socialism in the form of one global government separated into two tiers. The entire world will become one nation from which National Socialism reigns.

Those Planned "Surprise" Crises

It's actually hilarious once you see the full picture, or as much of it as can be cobbled together with the information available. George W. Bush got us involved in Iraq. Why? Ultimately, it was to eliminate Saddam Hussein, the Butcher of Bagdad. Do I believe that the original 9/11 attacks were an "inside job"? No, but I do believe that our government at the very least either knew about the potential for this event or was simply too stupid to figure out that some basic precautions should have been exercised since terrorists had attempted to attack the base of the WTC in 1993. Wouldn't you think that our government would stop and ask, "Since they tried that once, they might try it again. Shouldn't we do what we can to prepare?"

Instead and in spite of the intelligence that indicated a major attack was on its way (though Condoleezza Rice stated publicly that there was "no actionable intelligence"), our government either ignored it or simply didn't know what to do about it.

This is very reminiscent of what just occurred in Benghazi, with Mr. Obama either not knowing what to do (because he said he was not aware of any requests for additional security) or simply refusing to do anything and allowing the chips to fall where they might. What do you think...honestly?

Oh, and be on the lookout for our government to simply release the blind sheik to Egypt eventually and probably without fanfare. Think that might have had something to do with Benghazi? Mr. Obama does not need to worry about any more re-election madness.

This type of misdirection is carefully orchestrated and often used by the PE for one purpose and one purpose only. What happened shortly after 9/11 took place? For one thing, the TSA got really busy abrogating the rights of Americans, and too many Americans let it go.

The 4th Amendment was set on the shelf. They were given the right to essentially bend us over and investigate our rectal cavities if they wanted to, and if we don't allow it, well, we're just not getting on that plane. Moreover, they may arrest us for our lack of cooperation or obstruction. How's that feel?

Flying the "Safer" Skies

I hate it when I hear the sheep say, "Well, if it makes us safer in the air, then I'm all for it," as so many uninformed and unthinking people say with a smile. What's next? The TSA will be telling us we have to lock ourselves in escape-proof, bullet-proof boxes (coffins?) with holes in them for air (maybe) and be loaded onto cargo planes in order to fly the "friendly skies." "Well, if it makes us safer in the air, I'm all for it."

There has never been an example of any TSA person capturing a terrorist before they got on the plane. It simply hasn't happened. Yes, they've taken away knives and even a few guns (one recently was from a flight attendant who forgot she had it in her purse), but they have never stopped a terrorist from boarding a plane. If they had, they would be bragging about it from here to eternity! The job of fighting off the terrorist is usually left to the people on the plane.

I read of an incident where a fighter jet was dispatched to intercept a flight because apparently someone was kneeling in the aisle praying. Because he would not go back to his seat, the captain radioed the ground and they dispatched a fighter jet. Was the jet going to blow the plane out of the sky before any potential bomb on the plane did that? It makes no sense to me.

So this is where we are now? Americans are in danger of being shot out of the sky because of some guy who feels the need to pray at that moment on a plane? No word on whether he was Muslim, or Jewish, or what. The article did not include that information.

I seriously doubt if I would be afraid of anyone praying in the aisle of a plane, unless, of course, they were completely blocking my path to the bathroom and I was in danger of peeing my pants because of it. Each new crisis brings with it more of a choke hold on the throats of Americans and too many are "like, totally fine with it."

I hate going to the airport. I hate it. I would rather drive 20 hours someplace than take a flight that lasts only a few hours. I hate going through security. I have absolutely nothing to hide, but we are treated as though we are criminals who do have something to hide and we have to prove that we do not. It's just like dealing with the IRS.

You go to security, you remove your shoes, you empty your pockets, and you take off your belt. By now, you have two pieces of clothing on and then walk through a metal detector (if you're lucky), but most of us wind up going through that back scanner machine.

I hope it is not lost on you that with many of those machines, you have to stand with your feet on the yellow footprints painted on the floor and you must raise your arms above your head as though you are under arrest. You have made that connection, I hope. It's part of the deliberate humiliation process. It is not accidental.

Then, the machine scans you. You wait until you are "allowed" to come out of the machine where you can see the image that the "highly trained" (cough) TSA agent sees. From there, they either let you go or you must endure more invasive inspections. One time, the machine highlighted part of my head. So, the TSA agents (two of them) had to inspect my head. It is times like these that you wish you had a severe case of head lice...

Pardon Me While I Inspect Your Drink

The TSA has now begun checking drinks you buy after you go through security. If you do not comply by allowing them to manhandle your drink, you will not be allowed on the plane. Wouldn't it make more sense to simply check the place where you bought the drink - the source? Well, that wouldn't be intimidating, though, would it? That's the object - intimidation.

Again, they interviewed some average person on the news about that and guess what their answer was - yep, "Well, if it makes us safer in the air, I'm all for it." Ugh. If the TSA told these people to jump down, turn around, and pick a bale of cotton, they would do it and do it with a smile because they're just stupid enough to believe that those actions will somehow translate to a safer flight.

Is it any wonder some people have gotten so frustrated with airline travel that they have simply removed all their clothing to go through the inspection? It's asinine how our government treats us. In fact, I'm sure the DHS is laughing hysterically at society because of how willing most people are to simply give up their own rights for the illusion that "we're safer because of it." We have a society of lemmings.

Continued Erosion of Gun Rights

With every new massacre involving guns in American society, a call goes out for greater gun control. Inevitably you hear people say, "Yes, I'm in favor of stricter gun laws if that means I can go to a movie and not have to worry about being shot." Yes, a situation like that is scary. No one wants to go through that. No one.

Mr. Obama came on the news after the Colorado incident to point to his two daughters and wonder aloud how he would feel if they had been in that theater. He said that so that people would think he's able to relate to them. The truth is that had his daughters been in that theater, there would have been Secret Service agents on all sides of the girls and at each exit. The agents would not have been watching the movie, but the crowd. James Holmes would have been shot dead before he had the emergency door fully open. Imagine how many lives the actions of the Secret Service would have saved.

Forgive me; I'm not trying to imply that Mr. Obama was purposefully disingenuous in his statements based on some flaw in his character. All presidents who would have made that statement following that massacre would have been just as disingenuous because they will never be in the situation that the rest of us have to travel in. It just won't happen. They do not live in our world. We live outside their world and that's the way they want it to remain.

The average person does not consider the fact that rapists, burglars, murderers, and more within the criminal element live among us all the time. Who knows how many of them we bump into on a daily basis? If we thought about it much, we would probably not want to venture out of our homes.

The government cannot be everywhere and they don't want to be everywhere. They only want us to think they can be everywhere so that we will give up our guns. Ultimately, it would allow them to ride roughshod over society and has nothing to do with wanting to protect the average citizen.

The more people cry out for stricter gun laws, the more the government will give in to that demand (that they have helped create, by the way), but at what price? Loss of our freedoms and greater gun-related crimes will be the result because the criminals will always have access to guns.

You mean criminals won't give up their guns? Nah, it's simply not convenient for them. How would they kill people or threaten them believably?

Facts to Consider

In the final analysis, the PE wants to reduce the world's population, which is why they really don't care how many people die by guns each year (which is a paltry amount compared to deaths by cancer or automobile). Here are some interesting facts for you:

- 43,000 people die from car accidents per year
- 25,000 people die from some type of fall per year
- 16,000 people die yearly from drunk drivers
- 2,500 people die annually from choking
- 2,700 people die from fires each year
- 600 from accidental gun shots every year

Aren't those facts interesting? Yet I don't hear the government complaining about wanting to eliminate personal automobiles from society as the number one "killer."

They don't jump on the bandwagon and attempt to make it illegal to have a fire in your fireplace that might engulf your home in flames.

It is estimated that over half a million people will die from cancer before 2012 is over. What has the government done to eliminate cancer?

Over 39,000 people die each year from some type of poisoning, yet you can still go to the store and buy poison. Why is this? It is because the government (via the PE) knows that when citizens have guns, they can fight back against a tyrannical government. I'm not advocating that at all, but there are people who would do that rather than give up their guns.

This is why it is important to the PE that gun-related massacres occur on a somewhat regular basis in the United States especially. Are they causing them to happen? I'm not saying that. I'm simply saying they take advantage of those situations when they do occur.

In some way or another, I believe that all of these crises involve some sort of propaganda by the PE, designed to make the average citizen believe that the government is there to protect us all the time and if we would go along with them in making gun possession illegal, society would be far safer. Statistics have repeatedly shown that the premise that fewer guns make for a safer society is not true at all;; an armed society is a safer society (By the way, it's also a polite society. Go to a gun range sometime for proof of that.).

Again, this does not mean that I believe our government is the cause of major criminal acts involving guns. That's ludicrous. I also do not believe that our government (or the PE) purposely or necessarily sets these situations up to occur either. In some cases, they might, but more often than not, they don't have to because there are plenty of deranged people in America (and the world) who are capable of doing all sorts of terrible things because they are already seriously emotionally or mentally damaged.

UN Gun Grab

Just one day after Mr. Obama was re-elected for a second term, he announced that he wanted to once again meet with the UN for the purposes of entering into a treaty that would ultimately wind up banning all personally owned guns in the United States. Did he state it that way? No, essentially what was being said was that the United States was now going to "back launching talks on a treaty to regulate arms sales as long as the talks operated by consensus."²⁵

It will start out generally, and any abrogation of 2nd Amendment rights for Americans will be thoroughly and uniformly denied by this administration. Unfortunately, if it goes through and Hillary Clinton signs the treaty on behalf of the United States, the treaty will then move to a point where anything can be added to it later that would include the complete removal of guns from law-abiding citizens.

Fred Brownbill, writer for Constitutional Legal Watch, said this concerning the renewed treaty talks: "On [November 7, 2012] Obama Took the First Major Step in a Plan to Ban All Firearms in the United States. The Obama administration intends to force gun control and a complete ban on all weapons for US citizens through the signing of international treaties with foreign nations. By signing international treaties on gun control, the Obama administration can use the US State Department to bypass the normal legislative process in Congress."²⁶

This will be foisted on the American people, and it is something that the NRA and numerous other groups who fully support the 2nd Amendment have warned us about for a number of years during Mr. Obama's first term. Interestingly enough, George W. Bush was completely opposed to entering into this type of treaty. If it goes through, we can count on our gun rights evaporating.

California has been doing its level best to ram through anti-gun legislation as much as possible. For a number of years, they have been trying to eliminate the ability of people to buy ammo online. They want to force people to buy ammo in a brick and mortar store and by showing their photo I.D. (the same photo I.D. that is not mandatory for voting in many states).

So far, this legislation has not passed, but they keep trying. If they succeed, then they can add things to it later on, like giving a thumb print for each purchase, or limiting the number of bullets you're able to buy. It is madness and certainly government overreach, but it is the way California has decided to go after guns without touching the 2nd Amendment. By making ammo extremely difficult to buy, they believe that is almost as good as outlawing guns themselves.

Some, of course, will celebrate this turn of events even though gun crime will continue to exist. Massacres related to attacks on crowds of people will still happen because criminals will always be able to obtain guns. Someone may say that even if this new treaty saves the life of one person, it's worth it. Not when you consider how many lives guns used in legitimate self-defense save each year.

According to one site, guns were used by law-abiding citizens to the tune of 2.5 million times in one year.²⁷ This same site informs us that at least 200,000 women have used guns to ward off sexual predators.

Is it just "right-wingers" reporting exaggerated statistics? Apparently, studies done during the Clinton administration prove the point. The difference in numbers has to do with the years that have passed since that time. *"Even anti-gun Clinton researchers concede that guns are used 1.5 million times annually for self-defense. According to the Clinton Justice Department, there are as many as 1.5 million cases of self-defense every year. The National Institute of Justice published this figure in 1997 as part of 'Guns in America' -- a study which was authored by noted anti-gun criminologists Philip Cook and Jens Ludwig."*²⁸

Are Guns a Help or Hindrance?

It appears that gun owners kill more criminals than the police do each year. Since the police cannot be everywhere at once and certainly cannot be in every home throughout America, this makes sense. There are more criminals than police. Take away guns from the average American and you leave them with few options for self-defense.

²⁷ <http://gunowners.org/sk0802.htm>

Not to be left out of the picture, the folks at CNN presented an article in an attempt to negate the statistics that appear to be legitimate. You can read their article and decide for yourself.²⁹

Of course, what I find interesting is that through a good deal of explanation and even what appears to be sleight of hand, author David Frum does his best to promote the idea that the studies that have been done (even government studies) were done by morons who plainly failed to take into consideration some of the cogent “facts” that Frum picked up on.

Look, we know that statistics can be made to say just about anything, so do your own research. Ask yourself how many times you hear about instances when a law-abiding gun owner saves the day either for himself or someone else by brandishing his/her weapon without even having to fire it. Do you hear about those times in the news at all? No. Why? The media has an agenda, and the agenda is to make people believe that guns are always unsafe. If they started informing the public about the many times that people used a gun legally and correctly to ward off a criminal, people might actually start thinking that guns could be a good thing if used correctly and in the right hands. That wouldn't work for the PE.

Would you really like some information on that area that the media dutifully refuses to report on? There are many sites on the 'Net that will provide it for you. Take some time and read through the situations they present. Ask yourself what might have happened to the would-be victim had he/she not had a gun at their disposal. Here are a number of sites you can visit:

- <http://www.thearmedcitizen.com/>
- <http://www.nrila.org/gun-laws/armed-citizen.aspx>
- <http://www.armedcitizensnetwork.org/>
- <http://www.armedcitizenalliance.com/>
- <http://www.guns.com/>

The above links represent just a few of the places that provide true accounts (and statistics in some cases) related to real citizens legally using a gun to either ward off a predator or take the criminal down through legal, lethal force when needed.

Removing guns from society will not remove guns from the hands of the criminals. If the Obama administration is successful in outlawing guns from society, gun crime will still exist. I would be willing to bet, though, that these crimes would not necessarily continue to be reported in the news much, if at all, because the ultimate goal of gun eradication has been achieved throughout society.

Home Grown Terrorism

Cuddy discusses the Oklahoma Bombing situation of 1995 as a prime example, and the details and ramifications are terrible and fascinating at the same time. Apparently, the Muslim Brotherhood had been operating within the United States long before that particular bombing occurred and, also according to Cuddy, they had a hand in that bombing. Oh, not directly, but through training of individuals who later carried the massacre out. I bet you didn't know that, did you? Cuddy documents all of it, and we'll talk about the Muslim Brotherhood soon. There is a great deal to say. They have been thoroughly useful to the PE and will continue to be so.

I have come to the conclusion that many within our government who belong to the PE (either as members or agents) know far more about at least some of the events that have taken place in society and simply allow them to occur as planned because of what they consider to be their greater goal. At the very least, they certainly take advantage of many of those crises in order to continue to push America forward to line up with their intended plans. Why would they not? If the crisis can benefit them, they would be stupid to not make use of it.

For instance, do you think people are simply imagining the fact that race relations in the United States have gotten worse since Mr. Obama took office? No, my friend, it's not your imagination. Worsening race relations is moving us toward a form of real and dangerous civil unrest in which the government will be "obligated" to further remove more of our civil rights and there will be the bleating of the sheep who say, "Well, if putting a shock collar around everyone's neck and activating it every ten minutes so that we pee ourselves dry makes it safer to be in public, then why, yes, I'm all for it!" Don't forget to smile.

So, with every new crisis, laws like the Patriot Act come into play. Once law, there seems to be nothing that anyone can do about it. I've been hearing the "officials" in Congress talk about repealing the Patriot Act for several years. Well, is it gone yet? We're still all on hold apparently.

Cuddy talks about things like the Colorado massacre. He essentially states that the goal is not necessarily (at that point) to create more gun laws, but to simply remind us of the need for them and to reprogram our thinking so that we - as a society - become more accustomed to the idea of a society without guns (my paraphrase).

They Can't Handle the Truth

The world is filled with people who do not want to believe that there could possibly be a hidden cabal of extremely wealthy people (and who have been wealthy for generations with what is known as "old" money) who share the same goal of taking over the world for the purpose of making their lives and their children's lives wonderful, while the rest of us slave away for them. In some ways, think North Korea, where the blessed are given important positions in the regime, while the rest either die in a prison or in their field. It doesn't matter to the "dear leader" that people in North Korea worship.

I do not have space to go over all the facts and information that Dr. Cuddy brings to the fore regarding the many presidents that have come and gone through the Oval Office. His articles are there for you to read at your own pace. What I'm trying to do is take the information he presents (as well as others) and offer brief summaries of that information so that you can see how all of it is interconnected.

Suffice it to say that there have been numerous presidents - including everyone's beloved Ronald Reagan - who did their part in moving America deliberately forward toward the goals outlined by the PE. No one becomes president without their stamp of approval, and only those who are completely willing to sell their souls to the PE (because they are usually part of it themselves) become president. It simply does not happen otherwise. That trip I made to the voting booth recently? Waste of time. So was yours.

You can read Cuddy's articles and books and decide for yourself if what he is saying makes sense and is even possible. For me? At this point, since what he (and others) has revealed about the PE coupled with the revelations from Scripture, it seems much more than simply possible.

Dr. Cuddy's books and articles are filled with documentation and specific quotes by past and present leaders. All of it supports the idea that the PE exists, it is an extremely powerful (and well-hidden) organization, and they have been moving the world toward their goals for hundreds of years.

With Knowledge Comes Freedom

I don't know about you, but I am sensing a great deal of release and freedom right now. The big picture is coming into focus, and wouldn't you know it? God was right again! Who would have imagined that? Certainly not the global elite or the many sheep in America.

Knowledge is not only power. It is freedom. I hope you haven't decided that there's nothing here worth your attention. I know this chapter was longer than the previous two, but I wanted to keep this info together. My apologies. Stick around because it's going to get even more interesting.

Chapter 5

The Art of Misdirection

You'll notice that since the re-election of Mr. Obama, things have gone downhill fast economically. The day after the election this past November, stocks tumbled and the dollar took a huge hit against the Euro.

Results of the Re-election

We've also noted that many companies have announced layoffs, something that was also not noted until after the election. Beyond this, Mr. Obama has just announced that he is closing 1.6 million acres of land to keep it from being drilled for oil. We have also learned that there are at least seven new taxes that will hit the Middle Class, who earn less than $250,000/year, and he is looking for a total of 1.6 trillion dollars in new taxes to help us avoid the coming fiscal cliff. He also continues to put American dollars to work...overseas.

What has happened? I thought that Mr. Obama was going to help us become far more energy efficient? He is trying, specifically in the areas of wind and solar energy and other “green” energies. But he also promised not to raise taxes on anyone making less than $250k. What has gone wrong? Nothing. Unfortunately, he was lying, because that's what the PE wanted him to say in order to retain the presidency. He is not the first president to lie and will not be the last.

Temporary Taxation?

Think back in history to 1913 when the personal income tax began. This tax, under then President Woodrow Wilson (considered to be a progressive of his time), was meant as a temporary tax, solely to help the war effort. As is often the case with government, unfortunately for Americans, once enacted, it eventually became permanent.

But if we go back even further in America's history, we note that the income tax itself began under President Lincoln in 1862, and during that same year, the department we all know and love, the IRS, was created. The PE has long had control of what happens in this country and they will not easily relinquish that power.

So between the coming of Obamacare that is being rolled out in stages over the next few years, the new taxes that will begin to take effect in 2013 (including the new Carbon Tax that will hit everyone's pocket book because these taxes will be added to all fuel resources, like gasoline and propane), and the billions being spent overseas, it appears as though things are not going to go well for Americans. No, they are not. Truthfully, the only ones who will not really feel the pinch at all are those who are extremely wealthy and those poor enough to qualify for Welfare. Everyone else will be affected.

But as if all this is not enough, we must also consider that not long after his re-election, Mr. Obama's own administration appears to be imploding. Don't be fooled though. This may all be misdirection.

What's happening? Well, Attorney General Eric Holder talked about resigning, though it appears Mr. Obama has convinced him to remain as Attorney General, for at least another year or so. Hillary Clinton has stated that she is done as soon as a replacement can be found. The latest news is that Gen. Petraeus - Director of the CIA - has just announced his resignation due to an affair. What is going on?

Several things may be happening, but since I'm not part of the PE, I can only provide an educated guess based on what I've learned. Starting with Petraeus, it is very likely that he does not want to play ball with the administration over the Benghazi affair. Mr. Obama needs someone to take the fall and obviously it cannot be him.

The Petraeus Situation

In fact, we know Gen. Petraeus' agency (CIA) was blamed for the lack of security after we learned that individuals in Benghazi were commanded to stand down (The State Department was also blamed).

Petraeus almost immediately came out with a statement that that command did not come from him or his department. What we have heard from the White House is that neither Mr. Obama nor V.P. Biden personally knew of any requests for additional security. We have also heard this story change several times. It leads one to ask, though: if Mr. Obama was not aware of any requests for additional security at one of our consulates, then how is he leading and how can he say the buck stops with him? A CEO would have been fired by now.

The Benghazi issue is coming to a head and many in Congress want answers. Gen. Petraeus is not accepting blame (as the Obama administration may want him to do), so all of a sudden, he is out, forced to resign over an affair. It is amazing how much time and energy the media is giving to that situation, yet they initially swept Benghazi under the rug.

The idea that because Petraeus had an affair, he feels the need to resign is laughable to me. Is there now some type of high value in Washington placed on morals? With people like Larry Sinclair who have written books on their alleged homosexual dalliances with Mr. Obama, why is that not taken more seriously? The press has dutifully ignored it. When it is convenient and necessary for the PE to get their way, the press then also obediently focuses on certain things, the issue with Petraeus being one of them now, while ignoring others.

The situation with Petraeus is presently being played out in the news and in Congress. As of this writing, there is no clear signal on what the final result will be. We do know that Gen. Petraeus has just stated before Congress that he knew instantly that terrorism (and not some 14-minute film that no one ever heard of) was the reason for the Benghazi attacks and that information – he said – was in a memo he forwarded. Apparently, and according to him, that information was edited out of his original memo. So, it appears that “the original CIA’s talking points on the Libya terror attacks were altered before U.N. Ambassador Susan Rice used them for a public explanation about what happened, so the next step is learn who changed them and why, Republican Rep. Pete King said Saturday.”³⁰ What a convoluted web.

By the way, before I go any further, let me clearly state that I am not saying that what Larry Sinclair has claimed is true, though it does give us reason to pause. The press gave the man absolutely no attention at all. Yet when the true conservatives were running for the GOP nomination for president, the press did everything possible to knock them out of the race. This was seen most clearly with Herman Cain, a very successful businessman who is also black.

It would not work to have a true conservative black man running against the black presidential incumbent. They got rid of him very quickly. The situation with Gloria Allred's constant lines of women being paraded across the stage with one allegation after another that Cain discriminated and/or sexually harassed these women became ridiculous. It was a case where the PE seemed to go way overboard to ensure that Cain would have no chance of success. They won.

Consider Bill Clinton and his "non-sexual" ("I did not have sexual relations with that woman") sexual contact with Monica Lewinski. We know what happened. We know he lied. Did he resign? Was he forced out? No, so why Petraeus? It is likely that they are giving him an exit. In other words, they don't want him to testify regarding Benghazi, but apparently, he has done so. We know by now that Gen. Petraeus has stated that he knew what was happening in Benghazi was terror-related and said so in a memo. That part of the memo was apparently edited out by someone else. Who? We just don't know at this point.

I believe that if Petraeus had been willing to go along with the administration's story involving Benghazi, we would not have heard of any affair, real or made up, and he would have retained his position as director of the CIA. Because Petraeus wanted to be true to the record and the timeline, the Obama administration pulled the plug on his continued employment as director of the CIA.

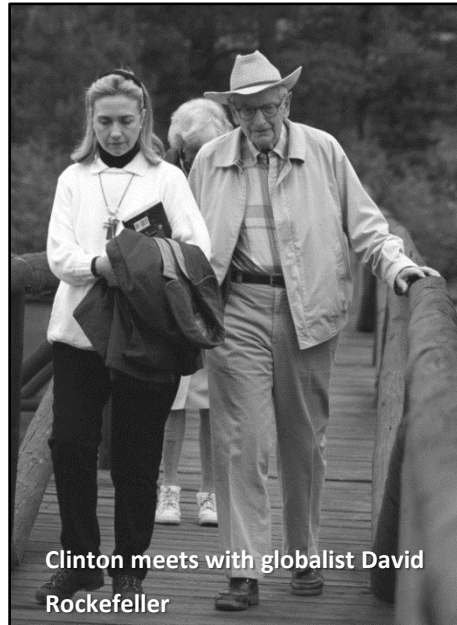

Hillary Clinton & Eric Holder

Regarding Hillary Clinton, she said long ago that if Mr. Obama was re-elected, she was not going to continue on in her present position. Is she done in politics? Is the Pope Arab? She has done whatever this administration has wanted and is likely very anxious to get out and away from it all and at least try to wash her hands of the blood that has stained the Obama administration's foreign policies. Once she does that, she will have nothing but superlatives to use when speaking of Mr. Obama, I'm sure.

Interestingly enough, there is a good deal of murmuring on the 'Net regarding David Rockefeller and Hillary Clinton – that she takes orders and advice from him. It has long been believed that the Rockefellers are part of the global elite, so her association with him makes perfect sense.³¹

As noted, Eric Holder also considered leaving, but changed his mind. Why did he want to leave? I'm really not sure, though some have mentioned that he will likely be considered for appointment to the Supreme Court once another seat becomes available. I'm not sure that he needs to stop being Attorney General because of that possibility, though. It is more likely that a major lawsuit which has just been filed naming him as one of individuals being

Clinton meets with globalist David Rockefeller

"Some even believe we are part of a secret cabal working against the best interests of the United States, characterizing my family and me as 'internationalists' conspiring with others around the world to build a more integrated global political and economic structure – one world, if you will. If that's the charge, I stand guilty, and I am proud of it."
- Memoirs, 2002

sued (for racketeering and money laundering³², along with "Fast and Furious") has caused a great amount of stress and he is hoping to reduce that by getting out of the way.

Based on what we think we know of the Power Elite (PE), we need to be aware that at least some of this may well be misdirection. Again, are they trying to get our eyes focused on this issue or that one, in order to keep us from seeing the big picture here? To us, it looks as though things are not going well for Mr. Obama. That may not be the case at all, though.

I think it is being made to look like there are problems, but the PE probably has everything under control, or most of it. It seems that nothing will become of "Fast and Furious." If something can begin to crack it around the edges, it will take many months if not years for it to break wide open. By then, Americans will have forgotten about it and it will mean less than nothing. Yet it is amazing what we learned about Petraeus and his affair in mere days, isn't it?

I believe the same holds true for Benghazi, which is probably one big reason Clinton wants out. Nothing will probably happen, although someone else may be chosen to be the scape goat to keep Mr. Obama safe. The PE is too powerful to allow something to happen to him, but in the meantime, Americans will gain the impression that people in Congress are really worked up over things and heads will roll.

Inner Circles Abound

I also want to say at this juncture that I do not believe all Congressional representatives are part of the PE or play their game. I believe that there are many individuals in Washington who want the truth and play by the rules of the U.S. Constitution. Those people, however, always remain on the outer fringes.

It's very much like the fact that within either Mormonism or Freemasonry, there are really two societies. There is the outer ring, made up of individuals who sincerely believe that these societies have and teach the truth. However, they remain in the outer circles because they either have not been in them long enough to have become trustworthy to those in the inner circle, or they simply do not care about moving up in the ranks.

It is the inner circles of both of these groups where people learn the truth about these organizations, and what they learn is far different from what those in the outer circles learn. How do we know this? Because there have been many examples of people who have made it to the inner circles of these groups and, after finding out what the truth was all about, eventually left. Many of these people became authentic Christians and then wrote about the inner workings of these groups, to their own potential danger.

I think this is the way it works in Washington as well. There are many elected officials who are members or agents of the PE. They keep a careful watch on all newcomers and they decide how far those newcomers will get. For the PE, it is likely very easy to stall the efforts of many in Congress.

Don't forget that many of these politicians who are allegedly at odds with each other in public are all members of many of the same groups, such as Skull and Bones.³³ The people that we know who also happen to be members of this group fascinate us.

Bohemian Grove

Of course, we have undercover video of the goings on at Bohemian Grove, north of San Francisco, thanks to Alex Jones. There, for the first time, we see the rather obvious occult connection that many of the world leaders (including many presidents from both sides of the aisle) enjoy and participate in. Is it all just for fun? That's what they'd like us to believe, but even more important to me than what they do at Bohemian Grove is the fact that so many of them who are allegedly diametrically opposed to one another in public with a palpable hatred seem to be the best of friends there.

Again, the thing we need to keep in mind is that the PE is adept at creating situations and events that serve to misdirect the minds of Americans. There are too many examples of misdirection to note here, but a couple will suffice.

Dennis Cuddy states: *"so that the PE can 'pull the strings' of its puppets, presidents have monitors. Just like Col. Edward M. House monitored the activities of President Woodrow Wilson, do you really believe Hillary Clinton just happened to meet Bill Clinton in the library at Yale University? Also, do you really believe Huma Abedin just happens to be Secretary of State Clinton's deputy chief-of-staff? Abedin has 3 family members associated with organizations having ties to the MB."*³⁴

Cuddy goes on to ask, *"do you really believe Valerie Jarrett just happens to be perhaps the closest adviser to President Obama? Jarrett was born in Iran in 1956 to a father who was in Iran from 1950 to 1961, which (perhaps coincidentally) includes the time the CIA was overthrowing Iranian leader Mohammad Mossadegh (1953)."*³⁵

Let's face it, if something as powerful (and well-hidden) as the PE exists at all, then these "coincidences" cease to be simply coincidences.

³⁴ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis243.htm>

es. These monitors do much of the grunt work for the person they are assigned to watch, while at the same time keeping their "mark" on the task and toeing the line.

Puppets All

Regarding Mitt Romney and Mr. Obama, Cuddy notes (from an article written October 1, 2012) the following information: *"Although Mitt Romney is a puppet of the PE (if elected president, he will not cancel NAFTA, GATT, or Permanent Normal Trade Relations with Communist China), their preferred candidate for 2012 is puppet President Obama because of his Muslim background and movement of the U.S. toward socialism (e.g., taking over Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac, General Motors, etc.). For the PE, Mitt Romney is their Wendell Willkie of 2012 (Willkie was chosen by the PE to lose to President Roosevelt in 1940)."*³⁶

With respect to the presidential campaign and what Romney could have said regarding Mr. Obama, Cuddy also notes that *"it is important to note what Romney could have used against President Obama, but hasn't. For example, Romney should be pounding the national airwaves with ads saying the Obama administration (especially Secretary of State Hillary Clinton) did not provide enough security for the U.S. ambassador and other Americans in Libya, but he hasn't. Instead, President Obama is made to look like a macho commander-in-chief, sending the Marines to the region and demanding the Libyan perpetrators be brought to justice."*³⁷

Of course, in this, the PE failed somewhat, didn't they? No worries. What did they do following memos and emails that came to light regarding multiple requests for additional security at Benghazi? Pointed fingers, denied, and misdirected. It was very good for the Obama administration that Hurricane Sandy happened, isn't it? It allowed the news bureaus to focus on that instead of continued and growing problems regarding Benghazi. Chances are the media will not get back to Benghazi either, or Fast and Furious.

³⁶ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis243.htm>

Mr. Obama could then be shown at the forefront of the preparations for Sandy to hit land, and if any journalist tried to distract Mr. Obama from dealing with that looming issue, they would be roundly shown for what they are - someone who was simply trying to bring down the president when he is obviously concentrating on the dangerous circumstances regarding Sandy's approach. Funny how the news had a photo of the Situation Room with everyone watching what seemed to be the Weather Channel. With Benghazi? No picture.

To their discredit, the mainstream news focused solely on Hurricane Sandy (with the exception of FOX News, which divided its time between Sandy and Benghazi). By the way, do I believe that the journalists and pundits on FOX News are all in cahoots with the PE by pretending that they are concerned about Benghazi when they may not be? No, not at all. I do think, though, that much direction comes down from the top and it filters throughout all the departments.

Mainstream News Bought and Paid For

Unfortunately, I have come to the point of believing that America's mainstream news is pretty much bought and paid for, and because of that there is precious little (if any) unbiased information being presented the American public. I've noted before that one of the richest men in the world (worth approximately $18 billion dollars) is also ranked as the most influential Arab businessman in the world.

Incidentally, this same man has invested heavily in CitiBank, Motorola, FOX News, and numerous others. Does he have a say in what is presented to Americans via FOX News? I have no doubt. Again, we need to be thinking in terms of misdirection, and for whose benefit? It would be to benefit the Power Elite. Do you think that this man I've just noted, by the name of Al Waleed bin Talal, is a member of the PE?

Another classic example of the use of misdirection by the PE (if true) is found with respect to the attack on Pearl Harbor. Many books have been written about this subject. Cuddy states, "The Second World War began with America declaring war (reaction) to the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor (crisis). And the Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor was their 'reaction' to the 'crisis' of an American blockade and other actions against them. The misdirection was against the American people in that the attack upon Pearl Harbor was presented as a surprise, when President Roosevelt's actions intentionally provoked the Japanese attack, and FDR knew it was coming."³⁸

Cuddy notes numerous potential examples of this type of misdirection used with respect to wars, going back to the Spanish-American War. There, misdirection was likely the culprit in assessing blame to Spain for the explosion that rocked the battleship MAINE.

Yet, in the final analysis, it was later determined that said explosion did not occur because of anything from outside the ship (such as a torpedo, etc.), but it actually came from inside the ship. Whoops? Did someone make a mistake?

Is it any wonder there is an anti-war movement? However, that in and of itself may well be something the PE created (or at least uses) to foment antagonism between those who believe war is useful and needed at times and those who do not believe war is ever justified. This type of misdirection really comes more under the label of social reprogramming and keeping society on edge. A peaceful society sees absolutely no need to change anything. Leave us alone. We're fine. However, factions in society create angst, frustration, tension, and even anger. This anger can lead to several things, and we will discuss them in an upcoming chapter.

Chapter 6

What You Don't Know Will Kill You

I know. The title I've chosen for this chapter is rather arresting, isn't it? I'm really not deliberately trying to be sensational at all, though. Once again, in this chapter about the Power Elite (PE), I am simply trying my best to present facts. Ultimately, you will decide for yourself if what I'm saying has any merit at all as far as you're concerned. If you do not believe it does, then you will reject it. If you believe it might or does, then you will keep on reading, studying, and researching on your own. That's the goal.

My point is that you should not end here with this book, but possibly use this book as a starting point and go on from here to other sources, other authors, and other people who have something to say. You will quickly learn who the sensationalists are and avoid them. You will realize that not everyone believes that one day aliens will come out of the ground, through the septic system, up through your toilet, and take you captive.

Regarding the PE: as I have previously noted, they have been busy, working completely within the shadows in order to bring their plan to fulfillment. I have talked about the development of the PE and how they have insinuated themselves into every part of society, including America's.

I have also briefly talked about presidential elections, the Muslim Brotherhood, and how the PE uses misdirection in order to bring their goals to fruition while the general populace is looking elsewhere. This is done much the same way that the illusionist fools his or her audience.

There is nothing supernatural about what magicians do. All of it relies very heavily on the ability of the illusionist to use the art of misdirection very well. Without this one thing, all of their illusions fail, because people then see how the illusions are accomplished. When that happens, the magic is literally gone.

Plan to Be a Non-Parent

For instance, I find it absolutely amazing how people view Planned Parenthood. This organization began largely because of one woman named Margaret Sanger. We'll lay out some actual facts about her in a moment. Today, Planned Parenthood is seen as a champion of women's rights, allowing them to terminate life (via legal murder) any time they wish. Some are even advocating partial-birth abortion as a medical procedure that should be made available.

I've previously noted that Michelle Obama is very much in favor of partial-birth abortions, and I would not be surprised to see it become law in the near future. God may allow it to happen so that it fills up the cup of His wrath that He will pour out on this nation (and the world) because of continuing atrocities like this.

With respect to Planned Parenthood, people who actually know the truth about this organization know that if it were not for abortions, they would make precious little money at all. As an example, in June of 2008, Planned Parenthood received $349 million dollars from taxpayers in exchange for the 324,008 abortions they performed that year in the United States.³⁹ The president of their organization - Cecile Richards - was paid a total of $397,039 salary and other compensation. Abortion is big business, and it's the money, not the support of women's rights, that is the larger issue.

So while Planned Parenthood appears to the public to be an organization that champions women's rights, what is often ignored is the fact that it did not start out that way. Anyone who truly wants to know the facts will find that Margaret Sanger was an avowed racist. She believed that blacks were sub-human and at all costs children of black parents should be aborted before they were born.

Margaret Sanger's Racism Remains Alive Today

In a letter Sanger wrote in December 1939, she stated, "We should hire three or four colored ministers, preferably with social-service backgrounds, and with engaging personalities. The most successful educational approach to the Negro is through a religious appeal. We don't want the word to go out that we want to exterminate the Negro population. And the minister is the man who can straighten out that idea if it ever occurs to any of their more rebellious members."⁴⁰

³⁹ <http://cnsnews.com/news/article/planned-parenthood-got-3496-million-tax-dollars-performed-324008-abortions-paid-its>

⁴⁰ <http://margaretsanger.blogspot.com/>

I've emphasized that section to emphasize a point. Sanger wanted to hide the fact that her goal was to literally bring about the extermination of "the Negro population," but of course she did not want that to be public knowledge then, and Planned Parenthood dutifully ignores historical facts like these today. Why? It's all about the money.

In 1925, at an international birth control gathering in the city of New York, Sanger warned in part against the "menace posed by the 'black' and 'yellow' peril," which of course was her reference to blacks and Asians. Many of Sanger's friends and colleagues were avowed racists as well as Nazi enthusiasts. Again, this is common knowledge and truth and only those who choose to ignore or overlook it deny or question it. Don't look for Planned Parenthood to admit it any time soon.

Sanger not only wanted "black and yellow" children to be eradicated through abortion but went beyond this to include anyone she saw as "unfit" for society. This has become known as eugenics, which is essentially applying scientific methods in an effort to improve the genetic makeup of society. It is indirectly tied to the evolutionary premise of the survival of the fittest. However, instead of nature being allowed to take its course, in eugenics, scientists step in to "help" Mother Nature along.

Abortion is now one of the normally accepted ways of eliminating what are considered to be undesirables from society. Abortion will never go away until Jesus returns to this earth. No matter what we do - and I'm not at all saying that we simply throw up our hands, but that we should continue to work for what is right - abortion will remain on the books as a firmly legal practice of eliminating unwanted "fetal tissue."

Eugenics Lives

Margaret Sanger was very much involved in the early eugenics movement and deeply supported it because she believed - like the PE - that the unfit in society must be filtered out of the population completely to help protect the world's resources from waste. There are several reasons for this. Just a few of them include the following:

1. there are way too many people on the earth now and it is dangerously close to not being able to support the current population of over 7 billion
2. the more fit the average person is, the better the PE will be able to use them for serfdom in the coming new world order
3. people who are more fit are less inclined to disease and early death
4. the Power Elite believes that they and they alone are the true inheritors of the earth, put here to rule the earth and subjugate its population. This same Power Elite not only wants the earth's population to be reduced from 7 billion down to 500 million, but has been working to make it happen

One of the things that the PE has continually used to at least keep a check on population is war. A stable, peaceful society is just that, and when it is that, population grows. That's not good for the PE, which needs a drastic reduction in numbers. So they find ways to keep the world off-balance through wars and rumors of wars.

Millions of lives have been lost in the many wars and conflicts that the United States has been involved in over the decades. This is also the case with other countries throughout the world where the PE's influence is felt.

Various cancers continue to take the lives of people, as do automobile accidents and many other illnesses that people wonder why science has not been able to find cures for yet. In one article by Cuddy, he noted documentation where individuals actually spoke of the fact that cures for cancers have been realized but they are not being used because of the PE's need for the world's population to reduce.

Cuddy also notes that at one time, the United States had its own eugenics program. *"In August 1963, high-ranking officials in the Kennedy administration appointed a secret commission (called the Special Study Group) 'to determine the nature of the problems that would confront the United States if and when a condition of 'permanent peace' should arrive, and to draft a program for dealing with this contingency'."*⁴¹ Not surprisingly, they learned that having permanent peace would not be good at all. The commission stated that, *"War fills certain functions essential to the stability of our society; until other ways of filling them are developed, the war system must be maintained."*⁴²

Probably what may be most amazing - once you get past the idea that our government wants many of us dead through wars - are the other options that this same secret commission came up with in order to further reduce the population of just the United States. Without concern, they state that *"the following substitute institutions, among others, have been proposed for consideration as replacements for the nonmilitary functions of war—an omnipresent, virtually omnipotent police force,... massive global environmental pollution, fictitious alternate enemies,... new religions or other mythologies,... and a comprehensive program of applied eugenics."*⁴³

Isn't that exciting? Well, if true, then it is clear that rather than wanting to protect us, our own government prefers to kill as many of us as possible in order to bring total population down to a manageable level. Later, of course, and not surprisingly, the author of the report - Leonard Lewin - claimed that his report was nothing more than a hoax: one big joke. However, others have come forward to negate that claim of his.

⁴¹ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis203.htm>

Ways the Government Thinks About Killing Citizens

According to Cuddy, other programs were actually instituted that would go a long way in reprogramming society to think in terms of fewer children. For instance, the role of women in the workplace became a real hot button issue. There's nothing wrong with women working, especially in today's economy where it is nearly impossible to live comfortably on one salary. However, the problem then becomes the issue of balancing work with the desire for children.

Decades ago, it was very common for parents to have three, four, five, or more children. Now, it seems that most families have two, or even one, and then they call it quits. It has become extremely expensive to put children through college these days, unlike what it was when even I was attending college.

When our daughter was in college, it cost us roughly $27,000 per year. How can people do that when they have three, four, or more children, unless they are extremely wealthy? Do you think rising costs of quality education have played at least some role in parents choosing to stop after one or two, and in some cases, not have children at all?

Our government - under direction from the PE - wants the population to greatly decrease. It is very possible that they will stop at nothing to make that happen. Dennis Cuddy asks what might happen if something akin to the Black Death were let loose in society in a controlled way. Area populations would obviously be decimated.

New Age Double Speak – “It's All Good”

I've been studying the New Age Movement for years. I have read many books by those within that movement and have written several on it myself about it. What astounds me is that like the PE, those high up in the New Age Movement thoroughly believe that a far greater age is coming after this one. This age, they believe, will usher in peace such as this world has never known. It will be a time of fantastic scientific discoveries, benefits, and bliss for all of society.

Of course, what those within the New Age do not tell the average person is that there will still be a hierarchy. Yes, they speak of a hierarchy of celestial or spiritual beings, also known as ascended masters, but they do not highlight the human hierarchy that will exist on earth, except for the ones who refuse to join this new age willingly.

Between the years 1975 and 1980, the New Age Movement in America really began to take off. If I didn't know better, it would seem that the goals of this movement are in perfect alignment with the goals of the PE. The one main difference is in how they mean to achieve those goals.

The New Age Movement literally swept across America and is still going strong, even continuing to pick up momentum, having gained places within churches. Some of those who promote New Age thinking and beliefs are some of the most well-known “pastors” in America or the world. They speak from their church pulpits weekly, illuminating their congregations with a mixture of New Age shamanism and Bible truth. Is it any wonder many of these churches are known as “mega-churches”? People like what they hear and they attend in large numbers.

What is also interesting, though, is that both the PE and the New Age Movement propose a serious reduction in the earth's population and even offer ways at least some of this will occur in the near future. Just take the time to read books by Barbara Marx Hubbard or Marilyn Ferguson or any numbers of books that have been written by authentic Christians, myself included, as a rebutal against these systems.

Interestingly enough, the concept of reduced population with respect to the New Age Movement is presented in terms of loving people and doing what is best for them. Do you hear the ethereal music yet? Kind of reminds me of one of the final scenes in Soylent Green where Edward G. Robinson's character goes to a facility where he will give himself over to euthanasia. He is guaranteed a full 30 minutes of time to watch whatever he chooses on the 360 degree screen and hear the music of his choice before he lapses off to a permanent sleep, guiding him into eternity.

Barbara Marx Hubbard speaks of a time when at some point in the future, spaceships will hover above earth's atmosphere, just out of human sight, and will at the same moment take 20 million or more people from the face of this earth. They will be taken and gone forever. Where are they going? According to Marx, they are going to a better place, a place more suited to them and their antiquated ways of thinking. There, they will be reunited with family and friends until they evolve spiritually enough to allow them to move beyond that plane and possibly rejoin the rest of the earth's population. Big sigh of wonder here. Isn't that swell?

Millions Missing in an Instant

What Marx is actually describing is something we Christians call the "Rapture," which many of us believe the Bible speaks of in numerous places. But if you read Hubbard carefully (and I would suggest getting one of her books), you'll note that she is really saying that the malcontents on earth will be removed from it, but it is all done for love: love for the earth and love for those being removed. These malcontents do not buy into the propaganda and lies of the New Age Movement for the future. She is describing authentic Christians.

Ultimately, the powers that be here on earth (and the spiritual powers that are in heavenly places who prompt people on this earth to do what they do) want to reduce this planet's population by nearly 90%! They've been hard at work, but I really do not think we've seen anything yet. We need to mentally prepare for what's coming.

I particularly think Dr. Cuddy has hit the nail on the head with the statement he makes about what Jesus said in Matthew 10:21. *"Jesus Christ, Who personified REAL love, warned us almost 2000 years ago of what was to come, when He stated in Matthew 10:21: 'And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death [Nazi death camps of the past], and the father the child [abortion today]: and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death [euthanasia tomorrow]'",*⁴⁴ (emphasis added).

Frankly, I have never understood that Scripture in that sense before. Jesus was referring to the times that were close to the point of His physical return. I always assumed He meant these examples as references of persecution that would divide families - some who were believers and some who were not. However, Cuddy's interpretation of Christ's words certainly makes sense, and it is where we are today.

I also believe some of this will happen as time continues to progress with respect to the arena of religious persecution that millions will live under because of the fact that Christ is our life and we belong to Him. Remember that Satan hates God with a passion that has fueled his purpose for being since even before he fell from grace. Since it is clear that Jesus is God, Satan naturally hates Him. Jesus warned that because the world hated Him, this same world (guided by the same god of this age, Satan) would transfer that hatred of God in Christ to Jesus' followers in His physical absence and thoroughly hate us.

Get It and Keep It Together Christian

Authentic Christians will resist the devil. Authentic Christians will stand against the policies of the god of this age as he attempts to bring his goals to fruition through human beings who have submitted themselves to him in worship and undying loyalty. This is what Jesus did and it is what we are called to do. Our very lives should be a witness against the hatred that Satan espouses.

Eugenics has been around for generations and since nearly the beginning in the United States. It was huge in the state of Indiana at one time and it is likely still going on behind the scenes. Abortion is merely a state-sponsored form of eugenics, which is why it will become even more popular and accepted as time marches onward.

Euthanasia is also a hot button issue today. Are there “death panels” in Obamacare? Not as such; however, there is a point at which it will be determined by doctors whether the expense of keeping someone alive is worth it. Age will certainly be a factor in that decision as well as overall health and the ability to fully recover from whatever ailment has them bound. If the expense outweighs what the “state” is likely to receive in return from that particular individual, there is precious little incentive within the structure of Obamacare to keep that person alive. They will simply be allowed to die and made comfortable while doing so. Not a “death panel”? Then what is it?

If the goal of the PE is to reduce the population down to a far more manageable 500,000,000 people throughout the entirety of the earth, then obviously, they need to ramp up their efforts, don't they? You can bet on that, and I thoroughly believe that this is why we are going to see some very nasty – and for most people, thoroughly unexpected – situations and events occurring throughout society over the next several years and increasing from there.

I've said this before: the PE plays for keeps. They take seriously their goal of ruling this earth and ruling it their way. There are many who believe this idea to be so outlandish that it couldn't possibly have any basis in truth whatsoever. Maybe you're one of them. I submit that if you share that belief, it is completely illogical based on what we know from history itself. The Bible reveals to us what the plan is all about in its overall picture, with many specifics that are undeniable.

Come Out of Babylon

The world is moving toward a day when it will literally be as one, just as it nearly was in the days of Nimrod of Genesis 11. To me, it is clear that God was always going to allow the world to get to this point; however, the day of Nimrod was way too early for that to happen because Jesus had not yet been born into this world and had not lived a perfect life, nor had He offered Himself as King to Israel only to be rejected as a blasphemer and to die a painful - yet substitutionary - death on Calvary's cross for you and me.

Once that was accomplished by fulfilling every aspect of the Law and the prophecies, then Satan was free to once again bring the world together as one. This I believe he has been doing diligently, but because of the introduction of the languages, cultures, and the truth of the gospel of Jesus, it has taken much longer than when Nimrod lived.

There have been many obstacles that Satan has faced and there are many more he must face and try to overcome as well. He will only overcome them as God allows, in His time and ultimately for His glory.

I believe that Satan has gathered to himself human beings who have done and will continue to do his bidding without question. If they fail, they are easily dealt with, and there have been plenty of people involved in political schemes who have died mysteriously for one reason or another. Neither Satan nor the PE cares about those people. They were pawns or tools, to be used for the greater good. They didn't work out, so, oh well. That's the way it goes sometimes.

Christian, I believe we can expect things to really begin ramping up now. Do not be fooled by the PE's use of misdirection. Do not become or remain enamored with the trinkets, bells, and whistles of this world. Do not allow yourself to become part of the system of Babylon that will be destroyed by God Himself during the coming Tribulation.

I can almost hear the cackling of glee from Satan's underworld as they know that they have been given the go-ahead to continue moving forward at an even greater pace than before. Time is short, but I fully believe in my heart that God will take care of authentic Christians on this earth. Nothing will touch us unless He permits it.

Create a Workable Plan

My suggestion is to come up with a plan while you are going through your normal daily activities. We are not supposed to hide in fear. We are not supposed to crawl into our bunker and pretend the world doesn't exist. Yet, I would strongly suggest you begin storing up basic supplies, like additional food stuffs, blankets, water, and anything else you need, as if you were preparing for a hurricane. Look what the people in the northeast have gone through because they made little to no preparations for Hurricane Sandy. In many cases, though, their homes were fully destroyed so it would not have made any difference anyway, but it would have made the difference for some.

For us, the Bible reveals too much to us for us to remain in ignorance. Make a plan that takes care of you and your family, and after you have done whatever you can to reasonably provide for your family as life becomes even more difficult, God will bless you. You never know how you might be able to share what you have stored with an unbelieving neighbor one day and in doing so be able to also share the knowledge that will provide for him the salvation that he so desperately needs but is blind to currently.

Above all things, as we continue to confront some of the issues that the PE is bringing to pass in America and the world, we must come to the point of knowing that God is absolutely in control of all outcomes for the sole purpose of bringing glory to Himself. We cannot falter. We cannot doubt Him. If we start to, then we need to - through concerted prayer - bring ourselves back to that point of trusting Him to provide what we actually need every step of the way.

You know, I have to say that I had learned much of this before I ever heard of Dr. Cuddy. I spent a number of years studying about the end times, the global elite, and their plan to dominate the world.

When the election took place I fell flat on my face, but it never should have gotten to that point. I should have known better than to put any of my faith in a human being candidate. God allowed that in order for my eyes to be opened to the truth. I am glad because I now am on my way to fully realizing the freedom that comes from knowing God is in charge of all outcomes and that He loves me tremendously.

The times ahead are going to be very tough indeed, financially, economically, and in other ways. However, they do not need to be difficult spiritually if I am willing to keep my eyes on God, understanding what He is allowing to take place in society.

Is Civil Strife Coming?

I touched on this subject in a previous chapter related to the Power Elite (PE), but it's probably good to go into a bit more detail. We've talked very briefly about how the PE has been working to overthrow the norms of society. They've done this through misdirection and eugenics (especially abortion), which continues to be direct attack on the biblical values (the sanctity of life) upon which this country was founded. They've also used the issue of race, and I believe we are starting to see a new wave of racial difficulties approaching.

Uniting the Races?

Far from uniting the races, it would appear that Mr. Obama (along with the media) has really done nothing that would help the races move toward one another in sincere reconciliation and trust. I'm not saying that this has been his idea, but regarding the PE, you'll know that I believe they have a plan and that plan is currently being carried out through Mr. Obama and his administration, along with many other PE members and agents who are located throughout global society in order to foment change any way possible. Race relations have simply not improved under the Obama administration policies and rhetoric.

One of the things that the PE has worked very hard at is their attempts to overthrow what they currently and cynically refer to as "traditional values." Once they began the attack decades ago, they have never let up, and I believe now more than ever that they will increase these efforts to replace these traditional values with a far more modern or progressive (relevant) approach, if you will. This has been happening for a while, but it is gaining momentum.

We all know what these traditional values include. Years ago, the husband/father worked outside of the home and earned the salary that provided for the family. The mother/wife stayed at home and cared for the home, the children, and everything related to that.

Tradition

Homes generally had one male parent and one female parent and normally had fairly well-adjusted children which were the result of that environment. Of course, there were certainly exceptions, but this was generally so. Most families attended church, or at least the mother did with the children. Dad would attend on important days.

Dad was seen as the head of the home and was respected because of that position he held. Remember the phrase, "Wait until your father gets home"? I heard it only once. That's all it took.

I'm not trying to give the impression that families of yesteryear were perfect because they were not. There were problems, but most of them were societal, as is also the case today. But the home, in most cases, was often the safe haven, unlike today.

The Old Won't Work Anymore

The PE knew that in order to move the world (and especially America) forward toward their goal of global dominance, these values - which are Bible-based - would need to be overthrown and replaced. They would need to be replaced with something else, something that was the antithesis of traditional values. Enter relativity.

Since we know that the PE knew that it would be impossible to change value systems overnight, they would have to hunker down for the long haul, gently nudging here, pushing there, maybe losing some ground there, but always coming back to push again later. They have never let up, and the push to change has been essentially consistent.

Now, of course, what we have is a society that has been turned up-side down, at least compared to the values that existed six or seven decades ago. If you stop to consider it, that amount of time is relatively short. Things have obviously progressed very quickly and a lot has been accomplished. In our most recent election, three states voted to approve same-sex unions and one state made marijuana usage legal.

Years ago, the favored shows were "Leave It to Beaver," "Father Knows Best," "I Love Lucy," and many others that emulated the traditional values found in society. Because they emulated what already existed in society (or what people generally believed existed), people felt confirmed in what they believed and how they lived.

Over time, however, things began to change. The shows on TV changed, slightly at first, then much more as things moved toward the values emulated by those on the Left and away from what was considered to be traditional. The most interesting thing about this to me is that many within the PE do not agree with those values, but they push them for no other purpose than to remove traditional values from society.

Bible? Out; Check. Prayers? Out; Check.

Of course, we need to remind readers that it was not long ago that the Bible and the Ten Commandments were forced out of schools, along with prayer. These rulings were handed down by the court systems in 1962 and 1963.

However, what is thought-provoking today is that many institutions (including public schools) are opening their doors, classrooms, and hearts to Islam. This includes teaching young children how to actually participate in Islamic prayers and other things that are Islam-specific. While Christians in this country are being told they cannot pray in public, etc., no such ruling like this applies to Muslims who pray five times a day throughout New York City and elsewhere, as just one example.

Though our government goes to the extreme in many cases to ensure that there is not even a hint of support for one particular religion when it comes to Christianity, the same cannot be said about our government's leaning toward and even the encouragement of Islamic doctrine and beliefs in American society. This can be clearly seen in places like Dearborn, MI and Murphreesboro, TN, where huge mosques and extremely large Muslim populations have grown to clearly become the majority.

While there is not necessarily anything wrong with that, it becomes a problem when mayors and chiefs of police seem to cater to Muslim sensibilities, even going so far as to allow their religious beliefs and tenets to become public spectacle while denying the same privilege to Christians.

Doesn't it seem strange that a country that was largely founded upon Judeo-Christian principles has become a country that prohibits public prayers or the placement of Bibles or the Ten Commandments in government buildings? The PE has been working overtime to establish their set of values as a replacement to the traditional set of biblical values upon which this country was built.

As I've said before, even though biblical values were widely incorporated or reflected in the Constitution and Bill of Rights and in the correspondence of many of our Founding Fathers, this in and of itself does not mean to imply that those men were actual Christians. I've discussed the fact elsewhere that many were likely Deists.

Be that as it may, it is certainly unsettling to many of us that the traditional values that were part and parcel of this country have been all but swept away, replaced with the PE's relative truth which is guaranteed to change as they see fit. Nonetheless, it has been imperative that this country's original value system be completely eradicated from public and eventually erased from memory.

However, we also need to realize that once again this is part of the PE's structure and push within society to keep everything off-balance. Because of what they attempt to force on society, they know that at least one group in each situation will be offended and come to believe that their civil rights have been abrogated. This frustration can and often does result in flare-ups and confrontations. As the tension builds, anger can turn to civil unrest and even large-scale rioting. At this point, the PE sits back and gloats over what they have created.

As unrest continues to build - as it is doing in Dearborn, MI, as one example - the government will begin a campaign of clamping down. First, a curfew might be instituted that would call for everyone to be off the streets unless going to or from work after 10:00pm, for instance. If that does not work, stricter measures will be enforced to curb potential conflicts between groups, but not so much so that it is eliminated altogether. Eventually, if things progress further along this same path (if that's what the PE wants to occur), then Martial Law can be called for a small area of a city, an entire city, or even a complete metropolitan area or something larger.

Martial Law

When Martial Law is in place, local law enforcement makes its own rules. This is what occurred in the wake of Katrina, when the Chief of Police of New Orleans arbitrarily decided that no one would be allowed to keep guns. This resulted in law enforcement and military people being brought in to New Orleans from all over the United States and going house-by-house dressed in full tactical gear under the guise of determining whether people inside the homes were okay.

Often, these enforcement agents kicked down front doors and entered homes with guns drawn. Once they determined how many people were there, the first order of business was not whether those people were okay or if they had food and supplies. The primary reason was to gain access to that homeowner's gun stash and remove them, and this is what they did. Martial Law means the U.S. Constitution does not apply. Since it had been instituted in that area, arresting people, holding them, and taking guns from everyone was legal.

I believe that this is where our entire society is headed. If Mr. Obama (or any president) declares Martial Law for whatever reason, the U.S. Constitution is essentially placed on the shelf and a whole new set of laws are established for the populace. For as long as Martial Law is in place, the Constitution has absolutely no effect whatsoever.

The PE is forcing society to move rapidly toward internal strife in order to bring about massive change in America. During Mr. Obama's first term in office, it has become well-known by many that black on white crime increased. Did this have anything to do with the fact that America had a first mixed-race president? I can't say, but I can say that this type of crime increasingly became the norm (read the book White Girl Bleed a Lot as just one example of the tremendous increase in this type of crime in America over the past few years). Neither the Obama administration, Al Sharpton, Jesse Jackson, nor others from the black community ever even discussed it. To them, it did not exist.

What did the average American hear about, though? We did not hear about all of the crimes that occurred in our society in which whites were brutally attacked, raped, and even murdered simply because it seemed convenient at the time by the blacks perpetrating the crimes. Certain local papers covered that type of news, but it was rarely, if ever, in the mainstream news media.

However, one incident in which we did become aware was the one involving the Zimmerman vs. Martin killing. To make this more racially charged George Zimmerman, a light-skinned Hispanic who has one parent who is Caucasian, was described as a white-Hispanic.

Of course, the media knew that in order to foment deep-seated feelings of racial antagonism and angst, the story would work better if the main characters were white and black, and especially if the "white" person had killed the black person. The circus began almost immediately with Al Sharpton leading the way. It has become all too predictable.

Racial Crimes

Every day, there is a tremendous amount of black on black crime; yet that is also not covered by the media, which apparently doesn't care about that, and neither do Sharpton or (Jesse) Jackson. They only care when the tragedy involves a white person having the upper hand against a black person. That harkens back to the days of slavery, when whites owned blacks.

Do you recall the DC Sniper, aka the Beltway Sniper? A black man and his young black protégé of sorts roamed around the streets shooting at white people from the trunk of their car. At first, and interestingly enough, professional profilers who were involved in the case indicated that the perpetrator was an angry white male. That's what we heard in the news.

I'm sure it came as a tremendous surprise to the news media especially after the suspects were caught and it turned out the individuals allegedly involved were both black! Uh oh, now what? The media had to follow through and report on it, but it is interesting how much they deliberately left out, especially regarding the older man, John Allen Muhammad. In fact, here in the U.S., the media failed to report on the Muslim connections of Muhammad and his racial antagonism.

*"Instead the corrupt Liberal Media has claimed that Muhammad's real motive was to eventually murder his ex-wife, and his murdering the 10 other people was just a diversion to muddy the waters of a police investigation of his ex-wife's eventual murder. (They also censored his Muslim Terrorist beliefs.)"*⁴⁵

Apparently though, Muhammad had a multiphase plan, according to Muhammad's accomplice, a minor named Lee Boyd Malvo. "Malvo testified that Muhammad, driven by hatred of America because of its

⁴⁵ <http://blackracismandracehatred.blogspot.com/2012/01/racist-motives-of-dc-beltway-snipers.html>

*'slavery, hypocrisy and foreign policy' and his belief that 'the white man is the devil', planned to kill six whites a day for 30 days.'*⁴⁶

Malvo also testified “that Muhammad wanted him to shoot pregnant white women.”⁴⁷ So in the end, what Americans heard was not only far different from what other countries heard but was also completely different from the actual truth! Do you remember hearing about any of this in the news? I don’t either.

Imagine if the tables had been turned and the two perpetrators had been white instead of black and they wanted to kill six blacks each day and black pregnant women as well. Do you think that this information would have been kept silent as well? There is no way the news media would have not reported that. Since we have actual examples of what happens when a person even appears to be white because of the lightness of his skin (as in the case of George Zimmerman), we know what happens, don't we?

That is the type of situation that our media loves to focus on because it provokes the righteous anger of blacks toward whites. Too many white people continually deal with “white guilt” that members of the black community want to keep fostering. This is why we have Al Sharpton, Jesse Jackson, and other race-baiters. It keeps the problems on the front burner, always ensuring that it’s a “relevant” issue.

African-American Reverend Jesse Lee Peterson of *Bond Action*⁴⁸ spends a good deal of his time on his radio show speaking out about the fact that whites need to get over their “guilt.” His motto is “Uniting the races with truth instead of dividing them with lies” and he does what he can to get the truth out there. Is anyone listening? I hope so.

⁴⁸ <http://bondaction.org/>

Any time the media can use racial unrest to create more of the same, they will do it. It's part of the PE plan. It is this type of rhetoric that is being played out in the news as often as possible, and most people swallow it hook, line, and sinker when it comes to white on black crime, but not when the reverse is true. There have been horrendous examples of black on white crime that barely made the local papers.

Not Just Race

However, it's not merely race that is an issue constantly being played out in the news and that attempts to show whites (mainly white men) as the problem for blacks and other minorities. It's also happening with respect to white men in the political arena. I recently read part of what turned out to be an extremely asinine article by columnist Maureen Dowd in the New York Times. Her article was titled "Romney Is President."

The entirety of her article was a very sexist (and even racist) presentation of her attempts to portray white men who are severely disappointed that Romney lost and will not even consider the fact that Mr. Obama is still the president, solely because he is of mixed-race and recognized as black. The article was completely made up. She offered no factual basis for anything she said, and what's more, she didn't need to because she knew that she would hit a nerve, with women especially.

Dowd intoned, "Mitt Romney is the president of white male America."⁴⁹ She then went onto say that "In its delusional death spiral, the white male patriarchy was so hard-core, so redolent of country clubs and Cadillacs, it made little effort not to alienate women. The election

⁴⁹ <http://www.nytimes.com/2012/11/11/opinion/sunday/dowd-romney-is-president.html?smid=fb-share>

had the largest gender gap in the history of the Gallup poll, with Obama winning the vote of single women by 36 percentage points.”⁵⁰

First of all, polls prove very little to me at all, but they're convenient when they give the illusion that a person speaks truth. Second, what Dowd fails (miserably, I might add) to note is that the Power Elite is made up of a tight-knit group of men who are, for the most part, white. I frankly believe that the PE loves this kind of blatant misdirection and hogwash.

If you consider many of the names of the people involved in the Bilderberg group or those who have been and are part of the Skull and Bones or other secret societies, you see that rarely are they anything but white. There are many Jews who are part of the PE, but then again, there are many Germans who are also part of it. Does that surprise anyone? Look at George Soros - a Jew - who turned against his own people years ago, betraying them to the Third Reich.

People like Dowd who actually believe that the racism is thick from the white male end of things are absolute fools. That is not to say that racism does not exist from white to black and black to white, etc. What we see happening now, though, is the continued belief that the white male is the essential reason for the racism and ills that exist in society today. What good does repeating this type of rhetoric do for society (especially if untrue)? No good at all and that is the reason it is said. It creates or fans into flame hostile feelings from one group toward another solely based on the color of skin.

Dowd attempts to prove her point when she states, “Just like the Bushes before him, Romney tried to portray himself as more American than his Democratic opponent. But America’s gallimaufry wasn’t knuckling under to the gentry this time."⁵¹ Dowd and too many like her simply don't get it at all, though of course they thoroughly believe they not only get it, but are far ahead of the game.

Excuse Me, but Romney is NOT a Conservative

What is so thoroughly ludicrous is that Romney is not a right-winger or even a true conservative by any stretch! He is left of center, just as Mr. Obama is, but the media wanted to paint him as a conservative because it works better to pit a conservative white man against a liberal black man. Romney knew what he was getting into and even though his political career is likely over (as far as becoming the president is concerned), I'm sure he will be nicely rewarded by the PE for doing it their way. They won't forget him. He played the part they needed him to play at the time.

I read through some of the comments following Dowd's article and it absolutely amazes me that those people who left comments think they truly understand what's going on when it is obvious that none of them have a clue at all.

Dowd crows about the Bushes, however, all of them are part of the global elite, what we have been referring to as the Power Elite, or PE! As I've said before, no one gets to be president in this country without the backing of the PE: of that I'm certain. So not only Bush, Sr., but Bush, Jr. as well, and now there is the possibility of seeing Jeb Bush as president in 2016, as noted by Cuddy in a previous chapter.

Dowd just doesn't get it, and neither do most people, it would appear. They actually believe that the Dems and the Republicans are at two opposing ends of the spectrum. I guess I cannot blame them at all because I used to think that myself. In truth, as I've said, both parties are two sides of the same coin. They have the same goals (and

⁵¹ <http://www.nytimes.com/2012/11/11/opinion/sunday/dowd-romney-is-president.html?smid=fb-share>

I'm referring to the big leaders in each party that come under the direct rule of the PE), and the only real difference is how each party is allowed to appear to the public. The GOP is seen as pandering to the rich and keeping women and minorities at arm's length, while the Dems have become the party of the minorities and the average person. It's a hoax; smoke and mirrors.

With respect to the situation with Benghazi, we even have women Democrats who are claiming the attacks against Ambassador Rice are nothing more than racist and sexist attacks by men from the GOP side of the aisle. One individual stated, "It is a shame that anytime something goes wrong, they pick on women and minorities," Rep. Marcia Fudge, D-Ohio, the next chairwoman of the Congressional Black Caucus, told reporters Friday at a Capitol Hill news conference."⁵²

Comments like this are simply foolish, yet some people will pull the race card (or the sexist card) as Fudge has done, irrespective of any facts to the contrary. Something happened between the time Petraeus from the CIA sent out a memo indicating that the attack in Benghazi was terror-related and the time that Ambassador Rice went on television saying something completely opposite. Is Rice to blame or is Mr. Obama? Petraeus has testified that he included references to terrorism in his memo, but that it was removed. Others have come forward to say they removed it, but by the FBI and CIA's permission.

In any case, there are people who do not want this matter explored and by simply labeling something sexist or racist, they believe that no further discussion is necessary. To them, the continued pursuit of it simply smacks of racism/sexism.

If the attacks in Benghazi were known by the CIA to be terrorist attacks and not related to some movie somewhere (as Petraeus indicated), then the situation deserves examination and the truth needs to come out. The people who want to do everything they can to deflect are simply part of the problem and may well be in collusion, in my opinion.

The PE has been creating social change through race-baiting, propping up sexism, sexual harassment, and the continued placement of gays in very visible places throughout society to undermine traditional values. This has caused and will continue to cause issues that people will adopt, fight for, and come to blows over. It's what the PE wants because at all costs, traditional values need to go if they are going to create their coming utopia.

It is coming to a head in American society. It is coming. Do what you can to be prepared for it. Especially lean on Him and trust in His guidance. Whatever you do, don't get sucked up into the rhetoric.

Power Behind the Power Elite

Let's take some time to offer an overview of the power that has established and maintained the Power Elite (PE) since their inception. It's too easy for many to simply reject anything that has to do with some cabal or secret group of men who are so powerful that they have been able to direct world affairs from deep within the shadows because it sounds so conspiratorial in nature that for that reason alone, intelligent people tend to avoid the subject.

How Does Satan Work?

Whether intelligent people avoid the subject or not, surely the authentic Christian, armed with knowledge from Scripture, can easily discern and understand that a tightly knit group of human beings who remain way out of sight of public view could easily be molding society. As Christians, we understand that if Satan exists at all, as the Bible indicates he does, then that must be our starting point; and it is mine.

Satan exists and is the most intelligent creature every created by God Himself. We learn about his failure to remain obedient to God in Isaiah 14 and Ezekiel 28. We also know that he is not above using trickery and even disguises to gain the upper hand, as he did in Genesis 3, when both Eve and Adam were tempted to disobey God's clear commands.

A number of things from the Bible stand out for us regarding Satan and his abilities that we need to be reminded of:

- The god of this age. In 2 Corinthians 4:4, we learn that Satan's powerful abilities as the god of this age include the capacity to veil the intellect of men and women so that they are completely unable to see the truth of the gospel. Also note that Paul is really telling us that through this blindness, Satan is ultimately worshiped by people throughout the globe.
- The prince of the power of the air. Paul refers to Satan this way in Ephesians 2:2. Satan controls the atmosphere above the earth where there is tremendous demonic activity. It is from there he issues his directives that are implemented on this earth.
- Father of lies. In John 8:44, Jesus said that the religious leaders were like Satan. They lived by lies, as does he.
- Murderer from the beginning. Jesus also stated in John 8:44 that Satan was a murderer from the beginning. He not only prompted Cain to kill his brother Abel, but through temptation, caused Adam and Eve to not only fall but to begin the process of dying, both spiritually and physically.

- An angel of light. This is actually the flip side of lying, but it is an illusion that is caused by lying. Satan's favorite disguise is an angel of light, meaning he will often appear to be promoting truth, when in fact, he is still lying. Too many are unwise to this scheme and fall prey to it. Think of the ultimate con man.

If Satan is all of the above, we are up against a terrifyingly astute and brilliant individual with tremendous supernatural power. His power is absolutely not unlimited, though, and he is always kept in check by God Himself, who is the only One who is able to keep him in check. We need to remember this.

Satan's Dark Cabal

With all this in mind, it should not at all surprise us that from the beginning Satan began working to create a group of people who would share his power and ability in order to bring his aspirations to fruition (recall Nimrod, a hunter of men, in Genesis 11?). It is much easier to get things done when the CEO disseminates his plans through his upper level management team. They in turn relate those plans to their departments, and the leaders in those departments process and disperse it through their people, and so on and so forth until it gets all the way to the bottom. Upper management always reaps the reward of doing its job well, and it is no different with the PE.

It would be absolutely foolhardy for a CEO of a large enterprise to take the time to walk around and talk to everyone individually. There needs to be one central group and mindset that provides a pathway to get the message out in the quickest way possible. This is what Satan has done. It's simply logical.

Paul tells us in Ephesians 6:12, "For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the powers, against the world forces of this darkness, against the spiritual forces of wickedness in the heavenly places." I have emphasized certain words or phrases to show that Paul is pointing out that within Satan's kingdom there is a hierarchy, just as there is in any large business or the military. The directives come down from the top and are disseminated throughout the ranks.

I thoroughly believe that Satan has at least one major group that is charged with activating his plan for this world. I cannot see any other way he could do this, especially if one considers that Satan is not able to be everywhere at the same time. He works through his hierarchy in the heavenly realms, and his minions direct his affairs through their contacts here on earth - through human beings.

Satan Runs the World (as God Allows)

Again, we need to realize that even Jesus said that this world is governed by Satan. This is his kingdom...for now. Even though Satan was fully defeated at the cross of Christ, his actual removal as head of his kingdom has not yet taken place. Please recall Jesus' temptation in Matthew 4. There, Satan offered Jesus all the kingdoms of this world. Why? It is clear that he controls them. Jesus did not argue with Satan about it. He didn't call him on it, so we can be assured that in that respect, Satan was not lying. Jesus simply rejected the offer. One day, another will come - the Antichrist - and will be offered the same deal. This coming one will accept the offer.

So it seems reasonable and biblical to me that Satan created a cabal of individuals in this life that would be his arm of influence for the affairs of men. The fallen people here are simply used by him for his purposes, some more than others, depending upon ability, etc. I believe this has been carried on from generation to generation in the same general families, with some additions and/or subtraction as time has moved forward. That would be easiest.

Christians should never be taken unawares by what transpires in this world. After all, we are not part of this world any longer because our citizenship has been transferred out of Satan's dark kingdom into God's kingdom of light and truth (cf. Colossians 1:12-14) because of our receipt of the gospel and the salvation that comes through it. In essence then, though we are here physically, we are in fact behind enemy lines. Our main job - as I've said so many times - is to rescue others from the kingdom of darkness. We do this by living and preaching the gospel. God will open the eyes of those whom He chooses and they have the opportunity to embrace or reject that truth. Our job is to present it. We can only do that as we live among the fallen of this world, Satan's kingdom.

Satan has been bringing and continues to bring his will to pass. God allows many aspects of Satan's will to succeed because God alone is in charge of all outcomes. Everything that happens in this world will bring glory to God, but of course, Satan's goal is to glorify himself. God never allows that to happen, though to us it certainly appears to be the case at times.

It should also not surprise us that things happen in this world that are diametrically opposed to the truth. Therefore, these things are opposed to God and His purposes.

Consider the storm surrounding "Fast and Furious." Think about "Benghazi." Understand that abortion burst onto the scene years ago and Christians have never been successful in pushing it back. The demand for it continues to grow. These issues attack truth.

Politics as Usual

As merely one current example, consider the recent election and the reports of voter fraud that have allegedly occurred. Here are just a few examples to consider.

- Apparently, the number of people who live in North Carolina aged 112 and up number 3,020 people.⁵³ Unfortunately, records indicate that there are actually only 129 people in the entire state who have reached the age of 112. Something is weird. Logic alone dictates that it would be Guinness World Record stuff to have that many 112-year olds in one state!
- We previously pointed out at least one individual - Jim Turner - who blatantly stated on his social network page that he proudly voted for Mr. Obama four times (and he listed the precincts), then declared he was going to vote for him again. How many others did not brag about it?
- In Cuyahoga County, Ohio, the total population is 900,135 voters. Apparently, all 900,135 voters voted for Mr. Obama. Not one vote was cast for Mr. Romney.
- In Philadelphia, as I previously mentioned, 99% of the total vote went to Mr. Obama.
- In another county in Ohio, 106,258 votes went to Mr. Obama. Unfortunately, there are only 98,213 eligible voters there.⁵⁴
- Reports of voter fraud have gotten so bad that one group has petitioned the White House for a recount.
- Yet another group points out that 16 million fewer whites voted in this election than in 2008.⁵⁵

⁵³ <http://www.examiner.com/article/number-of-112-year-old-registered-democrat-voters-now-at-3-020-north-carolina>

⁵⁵ <http://beforeitsnews.com/u-s-politics/2012/11/16-million-missing-white-votes-where-did-they-go-2445032.html>

- In Florida, concerning Allen West's attempted re-election, allegations continue to surface regarding tremendous voter fraud issues there.⁵⁶
- St. Lucie County in Florida is reporting that 141% of the people there voted for Mr. Obama. I have no idea how you can have MORE people than actually live there vote for someone.
- There are numerous counties throughout America reporting percentages well above 100% having voted for Mr. Obama.
- True the Vote has released statistics regarding the massive voter fraud incidents that have been proven to have taken place in previous years. So for those who say that it doesn't exist, they either have no clue or they lie to cover their rear ends, as many others appear to be doing.⁵⁷

Regarding Allen West and his attempts to remain in office, at least parts of the media are finally admitting that maybe some votes were counted twice.⁵⁸ Where were they when the allegations first came out? Unfortunately, West conceded because time ran out.

In my opinion, it seems apparent that voter fraud is very possibly alive and well in America, and I would guess that both parties have relied on it. I'm also sure that the voting machines have made it much easier since they run on software which can be manipulated. In this most recent presidential election, it seems that the PE has relied too heavily on it. It is almost embarrassing how wide in scope this issue may well be. Yet, most deny it happened at all.

So what now? There are calls from many on the conservative side demanding an investigation. I haven't read about this in any of the mainstream media bureaus except FOX News. But of course, the Left has no problem chanting that “FOX Lies!” as often as possible, as if that makes it true. Nonetheless, the Left will be busy using their talking heads like Chris Matthews, Ed Schultz and others to explain away what only appears to be voter fraud.

Nothing to See Here!

Those in authority overseeing the voting process in Pennsylvania have stated that they see no need for a recount. They are saying that turnout was high and a very high majority voted for Mr. Obama. But when you have more people in a precinct or county voting than actual people registered, shouldn't that point to a problem?

In the end, nothing will be done about this alleged problem of voter fraud. Not one thing. Life will go on as usual and those who complain about it will be called racists (for wanting Obama out) or out of touch with reality. However, this issue has also helped the PE by creating more angst, anger, suspicion, and mistrust in the American people. It's working out well.

Again, I would like to emphasize that the outcome of the election is what God has allowed. God rules the world, not the elite or Satan. There is no other way to look at this. It doesn't matter if voter fraud actually took place or if it turns out to be purely conjecture with no basis in fact.

None of that matters as far as the outcome because God is fully in charge of that outcome, and I completely believe this outcome is what God decreed. We can consider human reasons why it happened, but the outcome belongs to God alone.

So, am I sitting here as I type this with a “sour grapes” attitude within me? Absolutely not! If voter fraud occurred, that is wrong without doubt. People should try to get to the bottom of it. However, one thing Christians should not do is allow themselves to be manipulated emotionally by the powers of darkness so that we become so angry that we want to storm the castle!

We cannot take to the streets and threaten to overpower our government or, as some are doing, call for secession. That won't be allowed to take place, but it will give our government a reason it needs to use the military and all law enforcement agencies to stand against average citizens, which may result in carnage and bloodshed. This could even result in Martial Law being instated, and we know that when that happens the U.S. Constitution goes out the window. Do we want or need that?

Christians should always stand up for truth, whether it's dealing with abortion, voter fraud, or something else entirely. However, we also always need to have a clear head and keep our emotions in check. We cannot risk looking as though we are taking the law in our own hands by stirring up problems in society. We also cannot afford to be controlled by our emotions.

I recently noted one person (a Christian) who posted on his social network page his belief that the reason Mr. Obama was re-elected was because we (Christians) had not done enough to keep him from being re-elected. He is very angry. My heart goes out to him, but I cannot disagree with him more, unfortunately. He is also in danger of being in rebellion to God by believing that God is not in control of anything or that the successful implementation of God's will is somewhat dependent on what people do.

For the past four years, Christians and other conservatives have been working diligently to create grassroots organizations, which have gained much strength and power. The hope was to replace some in Congress who only said they were part of the GOP with people who are true conservatives. Some gains were certainly made, but not enough. Is that God's will or our fault?

Did Christians fall down on the job since 2008? Did we fail to do what we were supposed to do? Did we stop praying? Did we get lazy and give in? Did we throw up our hands and simply admit defeat? Some did I'm sure, but millions of other authentic Christians did not. We kept at it, praying, submitting ourselves to God, asking that only His will would be accomplished. Then, when He shows us without doubt what His preordained outcome turns out to be, we go, "WHAT HAPPENED, GOD?!" Simple. His will happened, unless you believe that God is powerless and unable to push back against Satan. That's not the God I worship.

Consent Decree

I was perusing the 'Net not long ago and came across an article about why the GOP won't do anything about the alleged voter fraud that occurred with this most recent election. It was an interesting read, and if true, an eye opener.

First, the website that highlights the information we are about to share also has an article that contains a good bit of information regarding the possibility that voter fraud was part of this most recent election. In fact, voter fraud may have been part and parcel of the election process going back for several decades at least.⁵⁹

In their article titled "Why the GOP Won't Challenge Vote Fraud," they present what they believe to be "compelling and undeniable evidence that MAJOR vote fraud had been perpetrated in the November 2012 Election."⁶⁰ Their compelling evidence includes the charge that "The Republican Party made an agreement 30 years ago with the Democrat

⁵⁹ <http://fellowshipofminds.wordpress.com/election-2012/>

Party NOT to ensure voting integrity and NOT to pursue suspected vote fraud.”⁶¹

Apparently, it all stems from a lawsuit brought against the Republican National Committee (RNC) in 1981. “In 1981, during the gubernatorial election in New Jersey (NJ), a lawsuit was brought against the RNC, the NJ Republican State Committee (RSC), and three individuals (John A. Kelly, Ronald Kaufman, and Alex Hurtado), accusing them of violating the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (VRA), 42 U.S.C. §§ 1971, 1973, and the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.”⁶²

This has become known as the Consent Decree and it is very detailed. “The consent decree, which arose out of a 1981 voting rights lawsuit against the RNC, bars the organization from using voter challengers, poll watchers, and vote caging plans to target and intimidate voters of color. It specifically precludes the RNC’s poll watchers from overstepping their role as election observers and prohibits them from asking voters for identification, filming or recording voters, and distributing literature about voter fraud penalties. After a federal district court denied the RNC’s request to dissolve the consent decree in 2009, the RNC appealed to the Third Circuit.”⁶³

This is fascinating to me when I stop to consider how the New Black Panthers not only tried to intimidate voters at various precincts in Philadelphia in 2008 but did the same thing in the 2012 election (this time without Billy clubs). Beyond this, there were many allegations that numerous precinct people (who just happened to be Republican) were actually forcibly ejected from the polling places so that they could not monitor the voting process.

⁶³ <http://truth-out.org/news/item/7321-court-rejects-voter-suppression-efforts>

DNC Sues RNC

The particular lawsuit in question was brought by – guess who? – the Democratic National Committee against the RNC. The lawsuit claimed that the RNC had been involved in numerous tactics to either discriminate against or intimidate voters. The lawsuit was settled when the RNC agreed to several dictates of it, with sweeping ramifications.

“To settle the lawsuit, in 1982, the RNC and RSC entered into an agreement or Consent Decree, which is national in scope, limiting the RNC’s ability to engage or assist in voter fraud prevention unless the RNC obtains the court’s approval in advance.”⁶⁴ (emphasis added)

One of the directives that the settlement created for the RNC was that they were to “refrain from giving any directions to or permitting their employees to campaign within restricted polling areas or to interrogate prospective voters as to their qualifications to vote prior to their entry to a polling place...”⁶⁵ (emphasis added)

So essentially, the RNC was, from that point onward, unable to do anything to determine qualifications of voters. Apparently, this agreement was modified in 1987 to also bar the RNC from doing what they could to satisfy “ballot integrity, ballot security or other efforts to prevent or remedy vote fraud.”⁶⁶

Also according to the article, this Consent Decree has been renewed annually by the original judge who ruled on the case. In 2010, the RNC fought to overturn the judgment, but failed. The judge who denied the motion by RNC lawyers to vacate the Consent Decree is Judge Joseph Greenaway, Jr. of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Greenaway just happens to have been appointed to his post by Mr. Obama. Obviously, if all this is true, two things follow. First, the Democrats could be guilty of extensive voter fraud, and second, there is really nothing that the RNC would have been able to do about it due to the ruling in the Consent Decree.

⁶⁴ <http://fellowshipofminds.wordpress.com/2012/11/15/why-the-gop-will-not-do-anything-about-vote-fraud/>

If everything I've just related is truth, then it would certainly explain a number of things related to Mr. Obama and the allegations of voter fraud that occurred during our most recent election. If true, then the RNC's hands are tied and they cannot even appear to be doing something that would be seen as a violation of the Consent Decree.

UN Monitors? Mr. Obama a Communist?

Moreover, this is the first time – as far as I know – that UN monitors were placed in this country at specific polling precincts. It is absurd that our voting process was essentially overseen by the UN, which has no sovereignty over the United States but was granted such at the invitation of Mr. Obama. He even threatened state governors if they arrested these monitors, as several governors said they would do.

The same web page presents other information on Mr. Obama that is eye opening to say the least. There is more information on Mr. Obama and his possible connections to Russia. I know, it sounds bizarre, but stranger things have certainly turned out to be true, haven't they?

After presenting their initial article on why the GOP won't do anything about potential voter fraud, they note, "Now, we understand the significance of the account Tom Fife wrote during the 2008 presidential campaign. Fife, a U.S. government contractor, claims that in 1992 while he was visiting Moscow, a woman with undying allegiance to Soviet Communism (the Soviet Union had recently collapsed, on December 31, 1991) told him that a black man named Barack, born of a white

*American woman and an African male, was being groomed by communists to be, and would be elected, President of the United States.”*⁶⁷

Tom Fife has written several articles on the entire situation and presents some interesting information. Is he correct? You be the judge.⁶⁸ One thing is clear to me. I would not personally put something like this beyond the consideration or reach of the PE. I think they would do anything they could to bring their satanically-inspired agenda to completion. Fife speaks about the possibility that Mr. Obama’s presidency could have been in the works as far back as 1991. It simply would not surprise me at all to learn that this was true.

Satan's World Means Ugliness

This world belongs to Satan. Though he is technically a fully defeated foe, God allows him to continue to do what he will to thwart God's plans. He has never been successful yet and he will continue his “One Big Failure” world tour in order to be the primary reason God receives so much glory. That's what's in the Bible.

Since I have begun once again to realize these truths, I am absolutely amazed at how at peace I am with all of this. Do I believe Mr. Obama is the best man to be president of the United States? No, not at all. Do I believe it would have been wonderful to have an authentic Christian instead? Absolutely, but I know that it will not happen.

Would Mitt Romney have been better? Possibly, but not by much, and he would have been a move back toward the center. Moving past the center into the “right” zone wasn't even in the picture this time, though the media increasingly portrayed Romney as a “right-wing” conservative without actually coming out and calling him that. Funny how that works, isn't it?

⁶⁸ <http://fellowshipofminds.wordpress.com/2010/05/24/obama-a-sleeper-agent-for-world-communism/>

This morning I was talking to a friend of mine at church. He admitted his abject hatred for Mr. Obama, though he knows it is wrong as a Christian. He can't even stand to think of the man. I can relate, but as authentic Christians, we are not supposed to go there.

I pointed out to him that if he can step back and begin seeing the big picture as God sees it and has revealed it to us, he will soon realize that Mr. Obama is really a puppet. I don't mean that disrespectfully. I simply mean that he is like too many past presidents; they represented figure heads as the man who simply sat in the Oval Office. Don't kid yourself, because they take orders from the "powers that be." They answer to the PE and you don't want to cross them.

I cannot hate Mr. Obama at all. I can't even be angry with him anymore, as I used to be. When I think of Mr. Obama, I have the same feelings for him now that I have for a paper plate. Again, that is not being disrespectful. It means simply that I can easily look past Mr. Obama to realize once again the truth of what Paul tells us: that our battle is not against flesh and blood. The true battle is what takes place every day in the heavenly realms, and the earth is often the battlefield.

I've often wondered how many saints were able to face their persecutors without anger and hate. For those who were, it was because they understood that the big picture told them that God was in charge of all outcomes and that their persecutors were simply being used by Satan to cause division and hatred in society. I now believe that the saints we read about in His Word faced their persecutors with pity and a desire to see them receive the truth that leads to salvation. This is certainly what Jesus did, and it is what many did who came before Him.

Those saints who came before us had their eyes firmly set on God's will and His purposes. As Christians, we must always stand against unrighteousness. We have an obligation to do so, but it is when we allow the fallen emotions within us or in the world dictate how we should react to the unrighteousness that is so prevalent that we actually become part of the problem. In doing so we lose our testimony and God does not receive the glory.

I am extremely thankful that God has shown me what He has chosen to show me recently. There is tremendous evil in this world and I dare say that it is growing at an unprecedented rate. If you take your eyes off God's big picture, you will become swept up in the problems and darkness of this world. You will be focusing solely on what Satan is doing in this life instead of the fact that God controls all outcomes.

Christians Need to Be Voices of Reason

This morning after waking up, I checked the many Internet sites I normally check for the latest news and one thing struck me. People are still very frustrated regarding our nation's most recent election. Certainly, if there was any type of vote tampering, then we have a right to be angry, because that shows us that the system does not work. It's completely broken. I'm still reading reports of alleged voter fraud throughout the nation and it is very disconcerting. If these reports turn out to be true, then it is very clear this nation has big problems.

Secession?

In the wake of all this, there are many within this country that are calling for secession. Apparently, there are now at least 30 states petitioning our government to allow them to secede. This reaction to the alleged voter fraud is understandable to a degree, but it is still very alarming. I'm really not sure that people are thinking this all the way through.

It will likely simply turn out to be a huge waste of time because there is absolutely no way that the Federal government will simply allow states to secede. If leaders in these various states want to push the issue, then I honestly believe they will play right into the hands of our current administration and the Power Elite (PE).

If it comes down to it and things get really bad so that civil strife kicks into high gear, I can easily see the Feds calling out the National Guard and other forces to attempt to keep things under control. If that does not work, then of course Martial Law could be enacted. If that happens, the U.S. Constitution is set aside and the current administration makes the rules up as they go.

Yes, I realize that in some cases they have seemingly done whatever they've wanted to do in spite of the fact that the Constitution is the rule of law, but imagine what would happen without the presence of the Constitution. At that point, America will truly become a dictatorship. Is this what you want to happen? Is this what Christians are supposed to do? I'm pretty sure we're not supposed to be part of something like that.

In the back of my mind I can hear the words of Paul in Ephesians 6:12, reminding us that our battle is not against flesh and blood, but against those powers that are at work in the spiritual realm. We battle those powers in one way only: through prayer.

This idea that we need to take things into our own hands because of the way this election went is the world's way of dealing with it. It is not a way that I believe glorifies God in any way, shape or form. In fact, it will wind up ruining any testimony that Christians believe they have if they get behind something like this. Cooler, more reasoned heads need to prevail in this situation. We need to rely on God's wisdom, not man's brawn.

Will Revival of America Change the World?

It still amazes me how many people who call themselves Christians believe that we can yet take over America, either through revival or the ballot box. Folks, I also believe that God wants a revival of sorts, but I believe that revival is going to be for one individual at a time, not some alleged national revival. God is very interested in saving people, and He does that individually.

I simply do not believe that God will bring this nation to revival. He will undoubtedly bring America to her knees, not necessarily in repentance, but in judgment, just as I believe He is preparing to judge every nation on the earth through the upcoming Tribulation.

I suppose it is possible that as far as God's prophetic timetable is concerned, we are not even close to the start of the Tribulation. However, I find that difficult to believe based on my understanding of Scripture and seeing what is happening in the world today. If the Tribulation is far off then this is merely one of those periods in time when, like many “empires” of old, things went up and things went down. But if we really stop to consider things, we see that America may be on the verge of a total and complete collapse.

This seems to be in keeping with Scripture because as I have discussed previously, the Bible points to a time when the world will be one in goal, purpose, and government. It will be ruled by one individual, the final dictator (the “man of sin” as referred to by Paul in 2 Thessalonians 2). Though many prefer to understand these passages in allegorical terms, it is best, in my opinion, to understand the Bible in its most plain sense unless the context demands that a symbolic approach is necessary. However, even there, the interpretation of various symbolisms is nearly always provided in the text itself.

Yet there are too many (again, in my opinion) who prefer to allegorize Scripture, and it creates all sorts of interpretive problems that they normally do not see. The reason they do not see it is because they are not allowing Scripture to interpret Scripture and are generally focusing on this issue or that, without even trying to understand God's big picture as He has revealed.

Big Problems Ahead

But getting back to the problems facing this nation, as previously mentioned we've got Obamacare in greater measure in 2013 and more so in 2014. That means new taxes, even for the Middle Class. The seven new taxes previously noted will hit families making less than $250,000 per year in 2013, and this is in spite of what Mr. Obama promised us.

(I'm not saying that to be critical of Mr. Obama. It's simply the facts of the matter, and by the way, he, as a Democrat, is not even close to being the only politician who has lied to the American people. It seems to go with the political territory, regardless of political party. Remember President Richard Nixon's declaration "I am not a crook!"?) Beyond this, we also know through new EPA regulations coming down the pike that new taxes like the Carbon Tax will hit our wallets and purses.

Moreover, every day we read of companies laying off more and more people, forced to downsize because of the new regulations created by Obamacare. Many small businesses now need to reduce the number of employees and make most of their full-time employees only part-time.

Part-time under Obamacare means working less than 30 hours per week. If you are a small business and you have at least 50 employees, you will be hit hard. This is why many businesses are doing what they can to prepare for the coming major increase in taxes and other fees.

So, going into 2013, we will continue to see joblessness increase dramatically along with unemployment claims and more added to the Welfare rolls. This will create greater stress on our economy, from which we may not recover.

At the same time, many who had full-time jobs will be met with reduced hours. This will mean that they will need to get another part-time job (or full-time if they can find it), but that will not provide them with health benefits. If they do not have health insurance, they will be forced to purchase it or be taxed. Even though the administration continues to say that this is not a tax, but a “penalty,” we can be assured that because of the Supreme Court ruling, the IRS will see it as a tax. So, if you find yourself in the position of having to pay the tax for not having or being able to afford insurance, the IRS will also tax you on the tax you are being forced to pay.

Yes, there is tremendous frustration that appears to be building, but we need to have clear heads and use discernment and wisdom that only comes from God. We cannot react to all of this viscerally. We cannot afford to allow ourselves to be guided by emotions, especially now. Not only will those emotions rob us of God's peace, but they will cause us to act like the average unsaved person, who acts before he thinks. This is not good, folks.

God is in charge, and those who are so angry that they just “have” to do something are failing to trust Him. Take it to Him in prayer. Do whatever it takes to submit to Him in this, as in all situations. By comparison, are you as angry about abortion so that you want to go protest in front of an abortion clinic?

What people do not seem to realize is that this particular administration (that God has allowed to be in power at this particular time in history) is doing things their way. They have the support of most, if not all, of the media. There are people throughout society who are prepared to “go to war” for this administration if necessary.

We saw this before and leading up to the election, with the many threats of violence and even assassination if Romney won the election. They did this because people believed him to be on the right.

This is how valuable the media is to Mr. Obama; they are able to take someone like Mr. Romney and portray him essentially as a Bush clone. He's not even close, but this is a perfect example of people who think with their emotions and not their heads.

Stand with God

The only possible way to fight this is through prayer, and then once you pray, you need to accept God's will regardless of whether you like it or not. Isn't this what Jesus did in the Garden of Gethsemane on the night He was betrayed? Yes. He was so overwrought at the thought of what was coming, beginning that very night, that His sweat became mixed with blood from His forehead. However, He persevered until He had given up all vestiges of His own desires and willingly turned Himself over the Father for His care and keeping. He arrived at the emotional state of being in peace because of it.

I firmly believe that this administration, having been re-elected, is fully empowered by powers that we cannot see, but can certainly feel. They have switched into high gear now to accomplish the final goals. They will push ahead, and anyone who stands in their way will be run over without mercy. Frankly - and this may sound odd - but I am excited about what God is doing in America and throughout the world. Persecution always brings people to Him, and that is something that Satan has never been able to stop!

I know that there are people - Christians - who believe that another civil war is coming and we are to arm ourselves and actively participate in the fight. I cannot go there. I cannot take on the government. If someone tries to break into my home to do harm to myself or members of my family, that's one thing.

I cannot go on the offensive where our government is concerned. While you might think I'm simply being too afraid or too cautious, the truth of the matter is that I cannot picture Jesus doing it. I cannot envision Jesus leading the charge against a secular government – a government that has the position of authority – because ultimately God is in charge of all outcomes.

I am not telling you what to do. I am simply asking you to take the time to step back and pray about anything that you are planning to do in the coming days and months. God is in this and He has certainly not left His people as orphans. He knows our needs. He will provide for us, but we have to learn to lean on Him, now more than ever.

Political Subterfuge

I was reading through more articles by Dr. Dennis Cuddy recently and he made some very interesting observations. His observations were specifically related to the Muslim Brotherhood (MB) and the events that have come to be collectively known simply as “Benghazi,” which portrays to Americans and the world the types of things that have been happening and continue to happen for the sole purpose of shaping the way people think. Cuddy has numerous articles on the art of manipulating public opinion which are well worth reading.

Of course, let's not forget that Benghazi has once again taken a bit of a back seat because of the news of Gen. Petraeus' affair, and we seem to be learning much more about that with each new day. Benghazi? Fast and Furious? Not so much. Folks, we are being misdirected here by the PE. Our thoughts and beliefs are being manipulated by the PE so that we focus on what they want us to focus on.

How It Works

Let me provide a basic illustration in a very simple form regarding the art of manipulation. Do you remember when you were a kid and your friends wanted to goad you into doing something? If you didn't want to do it, you might simply have said something like, "Nah, I don't feel like it." However, too often kids simply don't let go of things like this, so before you knew it, you heard comments in response like, "What, are you chicken?" This dare was designed to force you to do what you might otherwise have had no interest in doing, not because you were allegedly scared, but simply because you just didn't care about that subject. It didn't move you at all.

But how did you respond, more often than not? You probably became indignant and wanted prove to your friends that you weren't scared, so you agreed to do what they were prompting you to do. Even though you still had no interest in doing whatever they had suggested in the first place, you now found yourself in the unfortunate situation of doing it simply to prove that you were not scared of doing it! Sounds like A Christmas Story, doesn't it?

Racing Toward the Finish

In 2008, in the time leading up to the election of Mr. Obama, the race card was being played as a type of dare, not only by the media but by average people in society. I personally heard people from the black community make disdainful comments like, "This country will never elect a black man president!" It was a dare, implicitly meant to goad whites into proving they were not racist. So, many white people took the bait and decided that the only way they could prove they were not racist was to vote for Mr. Obama, regardless of what he believed or promised. Many did just that.

The race card continued to be played throughout his presidency and even leading up to the 2012 election, and I believe it will continue to be played. I recall that on the day of the election Chris Matthews said something to the effect that if you did not vote, you were racist. The implication, of course, was that if you did not vote for Mr. Obama, you were racist.

Many still fall prey to this type of “triple dog dare ya” thinking as we come to place more value on how others perceive us than on how God perceives us, as if we are going to stand before people in judgment when this life is over. It's really more than a shame, but what can you do when ignorant people stoop to this level of manipulation in order to get what they want? It becomes thoroughly asinine, but the PE knows how well it works. Why should they change tactics?

Whites Want to Build Up Their Race. Really?

I read one article where black political pundit Nancy Giles stated, “It's been weird to watch white people report on this... And, you know, when you just showed that graph of the decline in the numbers, I thought, “Maybe that's why they're trying to eliminate all these abortions and stuff. They're trying to build up the race.” You know, maybe'.”⁶⁹ She was speaking of the post-election polls. Notice her statement regarding abortion?

In truth, her argument is completely baseless and illogical when considering the actual statistics related to the ethnicity of babies being aborted. Most, by a slight margin, are black babies, followed by white babies, and then followed by Hispanic babies.⁷⁰

If whites were so hostile to blacks, wouldn't we support abortion because of all the black babies that are aborted? Moreover, since the numbers of black babies vs. white babies that are murdered in the abortion process are so close, whites are certainly killing their own unborn babies as well. If abortion halts, we can surmise that both the black and white populations would increase by roughly the same amounts.

So the problem of abortion - because slightly more black babies are aborted than any other group - is really a problem of racism, isn't it? As mentioned in an earlier chapter, Planned Parenthood founder Margaret Sanger believed in abortion as merely one form of eugenics. It originally was meant to eliminate a race of people that she considered to be "unfit" - blacks.

I suppose Giles' statement might have some truth in it if the only babies who were being aborted were white, but that is clearly not the case at all. You tend to wonder how these people wind up being given a soap box at all. However, once again, when you step back to see the whole picture from the point of view of the Power Elite, it makes sense.

Giles' comments were meant as a support of abortion. She was trying to make the case that whites are opposed to abortion because they want the white race built up. Implicit in her comments is her support for abortion and a "heads up" that whites want to make abortion illegal so that they can see their own (white) race enlarged. There is no real logical reasoning here at all. In fact, it is so ridiculous that it is embarrassing pointing out the lack of logic here because of the risk of offending you, the reader, who also sees it.

Corporate Socialism

The “powers that be” try very hard to mold us and manipulate us so that we wind up becoming what they want us to become. They do it because they have been hard at work attempting to overthrow traditional biblical values for decades. At all costs, these must go if we are to move toward a world where their brand of Socialism becomes the norm.

As I have said before, though, the type of Socialism that the PE looks toward is what Cuddy calls “corporate socialism”⁷¹ and is used to create change so that national identity is supplanted by a type of National Socialism. At the same time, the corporate structure to some degree will remain but will only benefit those who are part of the plan, and it completely eliminates all competition. This is often done through tremendously burdensome regulations that are directed at specific types of industry and under the auspices of a very altruistic cause.

For instance, many of the coming EPA regulations are specifically geared toward shutting down the coal industry. Doesn't this seem to be a tremendous burden for just the coal industry, while putting minimal pressure on other industries? We are told that America needs to be “greener” and more energy-efficient. Who can disagree with that and still be seen as having environmental concerns?

However, no such new burdensome EPA regulations are coming (of which I'm aware) that are directed toward the oil industry. Why? The PE is heavily involved in that industry, but not the coal industry. So, on the surface, it appears to the average person that the reasons for the EPA regulations that will be foisted on the coal industry are mainly due to environmental concerns. It is only as we look beneath the surface that we learn the real reason for the new regulations: shutting down competitive energy sources in order that those within the PE who are heavily invested in oil will stand to make a great deal more.

If people can no longer heat their homes with coal, what will they do? They will be forced to convert to oil, gas, or electricity. Of course, the Carbon Tax that's coming will be added to all those. Still, the PE stands to benefit greatly because little to no coal consumption means a greater reliance on other energy sources like oil. In spite of the Obama administration's efforts, neither solar or wind power has taken off at all. Instead, millions upon millions of taxpayer dollars have simply been shoveled down a large, empty hole because these companies that received government loans and grants have gone belly up with, of course, no ability to pay anything back to the government. Of course, the consumer is really hit twice since no new and sustainable way to create energy has been produced.

Using the Muslim Brotherhood

If we turn to the Muslim Brotherhood (MB), we might be able to put this into perspective by following the same reasoning as we have regarding energy sources. The MB has gained quite a bit of ground since Mr. Obama took office. That much is obvious.

The MB was founded by "Hassan al-Banna...in Egypt in 1928."⁷² Once Hitler and his Third Reich arrived on the scene, they began using the Brotherhood to achieve their own goals. Interestingly enough, prior to Hitler's Third Reich, and generally speaking, Muslims did not oppress or think negatively of Jews. Granted, there was no revived state of Israel at that time, but there was general acceptance between Muslims and Jews then.

It was only after Hitler began working with the MB that many Muslims became more hardcore in their stance against Jews. The MB gradually adopted a position of contempt where Jews were concerned and they even became outwardly hostile to Jews once the MB began working with Hitler. I believe this very same thing is happening today because of the very same goals of the PE that were pursued through Hitler when he lived.

I've always thought it was interesting that something as "right-wing" and extreme as the Muslim Brotherhood could gain more and more ground throughout the world and within the United States. Yet Christianity and those who respect the Constitution and biblical values in this country are seen by our own government as potential extremists or "terrorists."

Going Easy on Radical Islam

Isn't it odd to you that regarding the thousands and thousands of terrorist events that have occurred just since the original 9/11, Mr. Obama has done everything he can to soften the blow on radical Islam? He has done this while at the same time doing everything he can to denigrate Christianity and other faiths within the United States. During this past Thanksgiving, he jokingly used the sign of the cross while pardoning the Thanksgiving turkey.⁷³

Consider the massacre which took place at Ft. Hood. A radical Islamist, who was also part of the US military there, opened fire while shouting praise to Allah, massacring many of our military personnel. Mr. Obama was quick to call it "workplace violence" instead of a terrorist act. Why is this? The Muslim terrorists and the MB are very useful to the global elite. Because of this, Mr. Obama will continue to do what he can to assure to the world that radical Islam and the MB are not as extreme as people think, even though most do not agree with that stance. Still, he will continue to espouse that view whether people agree with it or not.

People have accused Mr. Obama of protecting Islamists because he is one of them and therefore he is simply protecting his own. I'll admit that I have done that in articles on my own blog in times past. I will also have to admit that I have been completely missing the big picture. It does not matter whether Mr. Obama is a Muslim or not. He is recognized as a black man with roots in Islam from the time he spent in Indonesia. That alone makes him valuable to the elite because of his ability to work with groups like MB as no white president could.

If the overriding goal of the PE is to control all aspects of the world for their sole benefit in the form of a global National Socialism (which would ultimately be on a global scale since all countries would be rolled into one unit or system), then how would they do that easily or at least effectively? Basically, they let others do the hard work for them, and then once those people have done the grunt work, they simply take it from there, shoving the others out of the way.

Muslim Brotherhood Grows

In North Africa, for instance, there were the individual nations of Tunisia, Libya, Egypt, and others, each controlled by their own dictator. While those dictators all claimed to be Muslim, the reality is that they were still separate nations controlled by one leader for each nation whose Islamic beliefs and governing style likely differed from the leader of the neighboring country.

However, consider what happens when one organization - the Muslim Brotherhood - that is said to represent true Islam gains control of one, then another, then another country in that region? What we see then is the growth of a modern caliphate (Islamic government) that includes several countries together instead of several countries that are separate, each controlled by a separate individual with no ties to the MB and free to interpret the Qur'an as he will.

What happened in Egypt? It's very complex and nuanced. However, I do recognize that the Muslim Brotherhood provided a candidate for the "democratic" elections that took place in Egypt. Lo and behold, he won! Surprise, surprise! President Morsi of Egypt is the leader of Egypt and he represents the Muslim Brotherhood there, which stands behind him in support.

My belief is that eventually, those individual countries that fell during the "Arab Spring" will become part of the Muslim Brotherhood, though they may continue to appear as separate countries because each one will continue to have one primary leader. I believe these individual leaders will all be tied to the MB through their loyalty and commitment to that organization.

On the surface, we will continue to see separate individual leaders for each nation. Below the surface, the tie that binds will be the Muslim Brotherhood. This is how an Islamic caliphate is created and eventually becomes an Islamic empire. Once the Islamic empire has grown large enough, the PE will physically take over the reins. For instance, I believe they have already started by helping Egypt go into debt in order to survive. Egypt's debt is held ultimately by the PE.

As Is Naziism, So Is the Muslim Brotherhood

Cuddy explains it like this: "The Nazis had allied with the Muslim Brotherhood (MB) beginning in the 1930s, and because the PE doesn't like strong nationalist leaders, a pan-Islamic movement and loyalty were created that transcended national borders. As the (international) MB takes over more and more of the countries in the Arab world, it will be easier for the PE to negotiate a regional arrangement with them *rather than many national leaders. This regional entity can then be linked with the European Union and other regional entities to form the World Socialist Government. President Obama's Muslim background will help facilitate this for the PE."*⁷⁴

There are some within Islam who recognize what is happening. Cuddy tells us that "liberal Marxist Muslim Tarek Fatah said, 'The religion of Islam is being used as a tool by a Fascist force.... Instead of bringing victory over the Fascist forces of the Muslim Brotherhood, we now recognize that their infiltration is right up to the American White House, but we can't say that.'"⁷⁵ (emphasis added)

This is not how it is seen by the average American who is concerned about the encroachment of Islam not only in various areas of the Middle East, but primarily within the borders of America. Again, we see this in Dearborn, MI; Murphreesboro, TN; DeKalb County, GA; and numerous other places throughout America as well. Notice, though, that the sentence I've bolded highlights the alleged fact that the Muslim Brotherhood has indeed infiltrated the White House. This was not stated by some American politician. It was stated by a liberal Marxist and Muslim who understands that in some ways, control of the Muslim Brotherhood extends to the White House.

At the same time, what people like Michele Bachmann have said is then true; our government has been infiltrated and may have even been taken over by a terrorist organization. This has been done with the approval and even the invitation of a sitting United States president. In essence, it is a treasonable act, but the global elite do not care about that. They will do everything they can to protect Mr. Obama and his administration because they need him to complete aspects of their goals for the world and America. Once he is no longer needed, I feel certain he will be set aside like yesterday's garbage. I'm also sure he does not even consider that aspect of things.

Just as the MB was very useful to Hitler and the elite then, they are just as useful to the current elite now. In America, the elite has ensured that Mr. Obama remains in office in order to facilitate greater freedoms for the MB and Islam in general because as stated, they do a great deal of the grunt work.

Remember; at the very bottom of the social construct within Islam there are people who are willing to become living bombs for Allah. What other group can we say this about today? This type of Muslim will go to his death willingly, believing he will receive the blessings of Allah, gaining eternal reward after death by helping to create the next caliphate now. They see themselves as hero martyrs.

What is the most tragic is that the elite have absolutely no concern for these individuals at all. These are true serfs, willing to give up their lives for some notion that this world will be blessed because of their murderous actions. To the global elite, the Muslim who is willing to become a human sacrifice for the cause is not to be honored but to be used, so that in the end they will have what Cuddy refers to as "a techno-feudal society, where the proletariat would be labor serfs or machine serfs and the elite would remain in control."⁷⁶

Socialism for Us; Capitalism for Them

The PE are the consummate capitalists, yet they want to create a type of utopian global state of socialism for everyone else. They have absolutely no intention of giving up their power and fully believe that all of their hard work and effort to bring Lucifer's plans to fruition will reap benefits many times more than what they have now.

⁷⁶ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis210.htm>

They remind me of people like Michael Moore, the film documentarian. He is worth an estimated $50 million dollars,⁷⁷ yet he is always harping against the rich. Does he think he's fooling people? The only ones he's fooling are those unable to think for themselves.

The rest of us see what's going on. It is amazing how many celebs and other rich people do this all the time, trying to pretend they are just average people, but they are not.

What is even more interesting than the fact of Moore's worth is the fact that some people still believe the guy is on the up and up. They laud him for his willingness to want to tax the rich. What is absurd here is that I do not see Moore stepping up to the plate to donate some of his worth to our government, do you? He could easily do that by claiming fewer deductions or claiming none.

Like Warren Buffet, they all talk a good game, but in the end, they are no more part of the "99%" than any other truly wealthy person. They only like to pretend it. I recall how Moore started out, attacking the greed found inherent within capitalism in his first documentary, Roger and Me. It was hilarious and true. Now that he seems to have become one of the "one percenters," his integrity is questionable as he strives to show to the world that he is still the same guy he was when he made that documentary several years ago. He's not the same. He's changed, and it's because he has become thoroughly wealthy, showing no sign of any willingness to give any of it up.

Yes, in the future, the elite will take care of the worker, to an extent, but only in so far as they are needed to do the physical labor. The best and brightest will be better cared for because the elite will need to rely on them the most for their ideas and science. That group will represent an extremely small percentage, though. The rest are the grunts, the laborers, the people who do the actual physical work, and they will be a dime a dozen.

I know that the day after the election, Mr. Obama signed another executive order that essentially marries the DHS (and TSA) with the private sector throughout the United States. Wonder why?

I also know that Mr. Obama and Congress are starting to look at the oncoming "fiscal cliff" that everyone is talking about, and Mr. Obama has stated that he will consider no plan unless it involves tax hikes. In the end, it looks like we can expect tax hikes across the board for everyone in order to avoid falling off the coming cliff.

America is a nation that is on the brink of economic catastrophe. We have pushed through unchecked overspending and it will continue for at least the next four years. What will America look like at the end of those four years? It's anyone's guess, but we can be sure we will not look like the wealthy nation we always have been.

No Surprise to the PE

Regarding the re-election of Mr. Obama, Cuddy reminds us of several cogent points. "For months, highly paid conservative national talk show hosts like Rush Limbaugh, Sean Hannity and Glenn Beck were telling us that because of continually high unemployment, etc., there was no way President Obama would be re-elected. On the other hand, *for months I have been telling listeners on Radio Liberty that the Power Elite (PE) wanted Obama re-elected in order to fulfill their plan for world control.”*⁷⁸ It makes perfect sense when you stop to consider it.

This would make one think that the Republicans are done. Cuddy would disagree. He stated, *“In the pundits' post-election analysis, they next said it would be a long time before the Republicans came back. My response is 'No, it won't!' By 2016, many Obama supporters, and perhaps President Obama himself, will wish he had never been re-elected! Why? In the immediate future, he will have trouble avoiding the 'fiscal cliff' with the House Republicans coming at the end of 2012, and a recession could result. And over the next 4 years, the national and global economies will be even worse than today.”*⁷⁹

It will be interesting to see what part – if any – Mr. Obama plays in the time during his post-presidency. Will the PE simply toss him out after they are done with him, or will they keep him on hand to pull him out every once in a while?

God Controls All Outcomes

God not only controls all outcomes, but He controls many things that occur in this life as they happen in order to bring about His will and His purposes so that each outcome turns out exactly the way He wants it to be. When that happens, Satan is defeated, though it often appears to us that Satan wins. This is never the case and we can see examples of this throughout Scripture, but let me just offer some examples from the life of Joseph.

We have been talking a good deal about a group known variously as the Power Elite (PE), the Global Elite, the Illuminati, the dark cabal, or something else entirely, which controls much of what happens on this planet under the direction of Satan himself. I have no doubt that this group (and many offshoots of it) exists and has been placed in charge of bringing Satan's objectives to fruition. I would also like to emphasize that all of Satan's objectives are carefully watched by God Himself. Satan succeeds in pushing his will forward only as God allows.

God Uses All Situations for His Glory

Rather than appear to only be talking about the Power Elite and risk becoming one-sided in our emphasis, it is equally important to understand how God uses situations often created by Satan in order to bring His will and purposes to the fore. The difficult part, of course, is that as Christians, we have limited vision. We can see what's happening now as it unfolds, and we are certainly aware of the things that have happened in the past. However, aside from the fact that God has Himself revealed many things to us about the future, there are many things He has not given us information about. Our job is to trust Him for the outcomes that will bring glory to Him.

For instance, nowhere in His Word does He outline who the various presidents of the United States were to be. While God is obviously concerned with that, He simply chose to provide us with information regarding certain periods in history and the end of the age and what that will look like. We do know that eventually one man will rise up to become the final dictator; a man that God allows to rule. There are many portions of Scripture which speak to this truth.

Yet even though we know this will happen, we do not know who this "man of sin," or Antichrist, will actually be by name. He will be revealed to the world when the time is right for that to happen.

The same is true of the Gog/Magog War of Ezekiel 38-39. We do not know who Gog will turn out to be, but we do know that the term Gog is used like the term Captain or General, so obviously, it is a person with great authority on earth over a certain geographical area of the world. The word “Gog” is a designation, not a specific name. We will know who Gog is when the Gog/Magog War occurs by simply looking at the leader of that coalition of forces.

God has not shown us everything with specifics, which is why the need to trust is so important. If we cannot trust God to bring His will to pass, then we are actually saying that God cannot be trusted at all. That's blasphemy, isn't it? The problem is us, not God.

Focusing on Situations Takes Our Eyes Off God

I pointed this out with this most recent presidential election. I had difficulty accepting the outcome. I was frustrated and even angry. It was not until I began to realize that my questioning God was really another way of saying that I don't trust Him that I began to see the big picture.

Likewise, there are many people who refer to themselves as Christians today who are caught up in the circumstances surrounding the election and are angry because of it. Many are saying that we did not do enough. Others are saying if only we could have guarded better against voter fraud, things would have turned around. Still others say something else. Their focus is on what took place, not on God and His will.

Yep, there probably was voter fraud. Other things also likely occurred. There is a great chance that had voter fraud not been part of the election (if it was), then Mr. Obama would have lost. He would have been replaced with Mitt Romney. Is that what God wanted? Obviously not.

I think many people start out with their thesis statement that God has abandoned America. Because He has abandoned America, He doesn't care about the president or any allegations of voter fraud. He has turned His back on America and no longer hears or cares. Because of this, then who we have for president is entirely up to us.

Is God in Charge or Not?

I don't believe that for a moment. I believe God is still in charge of the events of this world and certainly understands Satan's plans inside and out! I also believe God only allows Satan's plans to succeed as they ultimately carry forth God's will!

Too many Christians believe that we have to get and keep God's attention. Because America has become so corrupted, allegedly in part because Christians have failed to do what they were supposed to do, God has turned His back on America and resigned this nation to failure and judgment. This is difficult for me to accept and it smacks of Dominionism, a belief that says when Christians are able to convert enough within the world, Jesus will be able to return as King.

The ridiculous part of that is that it makes God fully dependent upon humanity. His hands are apparently tied until we do what we are supposed to do. Another thing that is exasperating about this belief is that in the reverse, it is exactly what the global elite believe about their coming king, Lucifer.

First of all, God would never turn His back on His elect. Secondly, what only appears to be failure to us leads to success with God in every case. We see this very clearly in the life of Joseph, as merely one example.

Joseph, as a young man of roughly 17, had a gift of dreaming dreams and being able to interpret them. He was also immature, and he bragged about this gift to his family and especially to his brothers. He did not realize that he did not create this gift inside himself, but was merely the receptacle for the gift that God provided. If God provided it, did He want it used for Joseph's glory or for God's glory? Obviously, for God's glory, but in order to see that, God had to take Joseph down a rough road of learning. The end result of all that learning was the fulfillment of God's will not only for Joseph, but for his family and for the future nation of Israel that had not yet been born.

Let's take a brief look at a couple of highlights from Joseph's life after he was sold into slavery. See if any of this applies to you.

Tragic Events in Joseph's Life Ordained by God

To me, one of the most interesting things about Joseph and his situation is how far down the Lord brought him in order to bring him up. Of course, this was the plan, simply because God knew that Joseph needed to be fully humbled before he would be ready to use. But it is also important to understand that God specifically used numerous situations for Joseph along the way which we say were terrible and even unfair. That's because it is easier for us to focus on individual events or situations than on God's overall picture.

God's plan for Joseph was big. In fact, by all standards, it was huge, and if Joseph did not have the proper attitude and understanding of his own sin nature, human frailty, and tendency toward ego, and if he did not gain the upper hand over those things through His dependence upon God, he would fail and fail miserably. God ensured this did not happen, and He did so by putting Joseph in situations where his very will and ego would be stretched beyond compare. Through the very difficult trials of his life, Joseph was blessed by God with something far more valuable than physical riches. God blessed Joseph with wisdom, common sense, an ability to reign in his ego, and a desire for righteousness.

Because of the attributes that God grew within Joseph, when he became the second in command over all of Egypt, the one thing that did not result within Joseph was an inflated ego. He did not become enamored with his position or rank. He knew beyond doubt that where he had come to in life he had come to purely by God's design and by His grace.

Joseph knew that the gifts he had were given to him by God, and because of that he had no right to boast in these gifts or misuse them. He had not created his ability to interpret dreams. God had given Him that ability. Since God provided that gift, it became obvious to Joseph that this gift was not to be used for his own glory in holding it over the head of his parents or brothers. It was a gift, which was to be used for God's glory and His glory only.

Things went well for Joseph even as a slave in Potiphar's house – for a while. Unfortunately, as we are aware, the day came when Potiphar's wife expressed the desire to sleep with Joseph. Joseph refused and as he tried to get away, she grabbed his outer garment and he slipped out of it as he fled. When it came time to accuse Joseph of attempted rape, she had the evidence she needed - his garment.

From Potiphar to Prison

Potiphar turned Joseph over to prison. He could have had him killed, but that was not part of God's plan. This looked terrible for Joseph. He was being unjustly treated for something he did not do. Had God turned His back on Joseph, or was this merely another step in God's will for Joseph? Ultimately, it wasn't just for Joseph, was it? This happened because of where God needed to place Joseph not only so that Joseph and his family would survive the coming famine, but so Israel would be born. If Joseph and his brothers were wiped out by famine, Israel would not have come into existence, since they became the patriarchs of this nation.

During the time Joseph remained locked in prison, the prison keeper began to see Joseph as someone who was not as the other prisoners. God had caused the prison keeper to see Joseph in a favored light. Was this due to Joseph? No, it was obviously due to God's own purposes. He was going to bring certain things to fruition in and through Joseph. It was because of this that God brought Joseph into favor with the prison keeper.

The prison keeper came to the point of placing so much trust in Joseph that he did not worry about, or as the text says, "paid no attention to," anything that was under Joseph's care. This is not something that occurs unless God's hand is involved in the situation. Think about it. The prison keeper had absolutely no reason to trust Joseph at all. Like the others who were incarcerated, as far as the prison keeper was concerned, he was there for a reason. The reason was that he had apparently broken the law. Prison was his reward. The only reason Joseph would have stood out among all the other prisoners was due to God's hand on his life. This is why Joseph came across favorably to the prison keeper.

It seems from the biblical text itself that in short order, Joseph was virtually running the prison! This same scenario occurred when Joseph was in Potiphar's house. He entered as a slave – virtually owned and imprisoned by someone else – and before he left Potiphar's house, he was second in command.

Situations Simply Move us From Point A to Point B

It is tempting for us to focus on situations in our lives that we do not understand and to respond in frustration or anger because of them. Obviously, when we do this, we are not trusting God. We are trusting in our own "wisdom," such as it is.

If we are complaining to God, we are not seeing the fact that God causes all things to work for our good. Our inability to accept certain situations from God keeps us from growing in our faith (and again, we are talking about situations which seem to simply occur, through no fault of our own).

God gave Joseph a gift. He soon learned that this gift was only to be used for one purpose: glorifying God. It was because of the potential to misuse of this gift that Joseph found himself in hot water with his family. In spite of this, though, God's will was fully accomplished in and through Joseph.

Though his brothers meant him harm, Joseph's situation was ordained by God to bring him to greater spiritual heights and glorify God in the process. In spite of being sold into slavery, the Lord blessed Joseph. Potiphar viewed Joseph favorably and gave him tremendous responsibility because of it. Of course, what Joseph did not realize at the time was that he was being trained for a far greater mission, a mission in which the entire nation of Israel would be brought to fruition, in spite of famine, and given great rewards upon their exit from Egypt. This is God working to accomplish what He sets out to accomplish.

We see a change in Joseph from the time he bragged about his dreams in which his brothers, mother, and father one day bowed to him to a point where he had obviously given his life to God. This is exactly what Paul means in Philippians 1:6, "For I am confident of this very thing, that He who began a good work in you will perfect it until the day of Christ Jesus" (NASB).

Do You Believe God Cares for You in Good and Bad Times?

Can you say with Paul that you are confident that God will continue to do that good work in you until the day we stand before Jesus? If He has bought us and we have received His salvation, so that we are no longer our own, but His, then how could it be otherwise, in spite of what circumstances may seem to want to tell us?

I know many are frustrated about the recent election. But to allow our frustration to grow into anger is not glorifying to God, in my opinion. We will continue to read about more articles related to this administration that will undoubtedly not settle well with us. Instead of focusing on those articles, it's probably best to simply trust that God knows what He is doing and to accept what has transpired as His will.

"In everything give thanks; for this is God's will for you in Christ Jesus" (cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:18). What does that mean if it does not refer to all things? Is God in control of all outcomes, or only the ones that you like? During those times when we do not know God's will ahead of time, it is easy to become discouraged. This is exactly what happened in Joseph's life, and through the trials that God sent, Joseph learned the meaning of faith.

The Underlying Corruption of Babylon

Let's face it. Most people - Christians included - fail at truly understanding just how perverse, pervasive, and corrupt this evil world system is, something the Bible refers to as Babylon.

We fail in this because we cannot see beneath the surface, and we rarely even try to look there. What we generally see is on the surface and we see only symptoms, though I believe many of us see them as the actual problem. There is a huge difference, and at one time I also believed that by simply changing administrations, for instance, we would solve the problems facing America. Of course, I now realize that this is not true, and had Mr. Romney won in our most recent election, it likely would have given everyone a false hope that things were going to be “okay” when in reality little would change.

We tend to see things about our government that become public after they happen. We see the result of issues that our government deals with, but they are still symptoms, not the problems themselves.

We do not see all that has led up to a particular event; the making of it. Moreover, we are also not aware of the path that takes us eventually back to the people who make the decisions for this or that event to occur. Beyond this, we are unable to see how a particular issue ultimately starts with Satan himself because we are not in the habit of thinking in those terms.

I believe we truly see precious little of that, and even those things that end up becoming public are the tip of the iceberg, with most things remaining cleverly hidden deep in the shadows. This vast network of darkness is so detailed, so embedded into the world's system, that it really is impossible for us to gain more than a glimpse of it unless God allows.

Nimrod: Hunter of Men

The system of Babylon had its true start with Nimrod (Genesis 11) and its source has always been Satan. Though God interrupted Satan's plans at that point, Satan was allowed to continue, though he had to essentially start from scratch. It has also taken him a great deal longer to get things to this point, but he is nearly there.

Satan has been working consistently since Nimrod, and God has allowed it to continue because God will receive tremendous glory from the full and final failure of Satan's system of Babylon. This will happen in the future, as already noted, but in the meantime, Christians must learn to understand that this system that Satan created will be allowed to continue and grow until God (and only God) actually destroys it. We cannot stop it. In fact, we cannot even put a dent in it unless God allows it. I'm not saying that we should give up because of it. I'm simply saying we should recognize the obvious truth of God's Word that only He will overcome it.

From all appearances, God seems to be allowing Satan's system to take off on wings of its own making. I believe that though this system will become thoroughly global, overcoming everything put in its path, God will continue to grant victories here and there for His purposes and He will use His children to accomplish those victories, especially in the area of evangelism.

Powering the Front-Liners

Let's say that a group we call the global elite does exist and controls who becomes president and has been at it for a while now. Does that mean that the president himself knows who these people are and the type of true power they wield? I don't think so, and it's not necessary that he does. I believe that each president gets his orders and it is up to him to make them happen with as much backing of the elite as he has available to him. Numerous presidents have made comments about the "powers that be" or the system that works deeply from the shadows. Logically, we must ask, why would this not be the case?

I know, I know. That sounds so conspiratorial, doesn't it? It's like believing in hobgoblins lurking behind every tree in the forest. Most people prefer to believe that with few exceptions, what you see is what you get. They tend to think that while there are areas or aspects of corruption in our government, it can't be all-pervasive. They refuse to believe it, and because of that they trust they can make a difference within the political arena or that ultimately our leaders essentially have mostly altruistic motives for whatever they do.

Regarding the idea that something can be pervasive, yet always out of sight except for the symptoms, let me provide a medical example that I think will help to illustrate this situation. This might make it easier to understand what I'm saying.

The Problem is Truly Systemic

There are many diseases that can affect people, and many of them are not fatal, but simply a constant annoyance. A disease like this that remains in a person's system and is able to continually attack parts of the person's body throughout his or her life at various times is just not pleasant for the individual.

This type of disease is often difficult to treat. Because it's not fatal, scientists spend more time focusing on those diseases that are fatal.

In the case of a non-fatal disease that currently has no cure, all doctors can really do is treat symptoms of the disease, not the disease itself. In some sense, this is what medicine does in nearly all cases, yet for the diseases that are cured, the symptoms, along with the actual disease, goes away.

Treating the symptoms, though, does not eradicate the disease itself if the disease has no cure and is not fatal. Medicine simply treats what is seen superficially: the reactions caused by the disease.

For instance, an inflammatory, incurable skin disorder known as lichen planopilaris is not fatal. Unfortunately, doctors have no firm data on how a person contracts the disease, and neither do they know how to get rid of it permanently. They are fairly certain that it is not genetic, but environmental. Beyond that, they merely treat the reactions that are caused by the disease.

Some of the symptoms include:

- Itching
- Pain

- Tenderness
- Discomfort
- Burning

Often, the disease attacks the hair follicles on the head, killing individual hairs and leaving what is known as scarring alopecia where hair used to be. These patches of baldness point to the fact that the lichen planopilaris was there, did its damage, and left, for a while. The body's immune system helps push back against the disease, but it cannot completely eradicate it.

This disease can also attack the mucous areas inside the mouth, creating enlarged (purplish and painful) gums, and it can even crack molars if the stress in the mouth becomes too much. Burning, redness, profuse sweating of the underarms, constant itch, and general discomfort are all added to the mix, making the patient extremely uncomfortable.

Since there is no known cure, doctors simply treat symptoms individually. Steroid creams, shots, allergy medications, or pills are often administered as well as other drugs; those that have had some success treating malaria, for instance, have been found to offer some relief for this disease.

Symptoms May Go Away...For A While

All this is to say that even when the symptoms subside, the disease itself remains in the person's system. In effect, lichen planopilaris is a systemic disease because it can affect any part of the patient's body and is always there even when it is not obviously active. Some people have lost all of their hair - head hair, body hair, whiskers, eyebrows, and eyelashes.

So, while treating the symptoms certainly helps the patient, since the disease is never fully eradicated (but simply goes into remission), it can always recur after a time of dormancy. This is what a person living with lichen planopilaris can expect. In the past 20 years, no scientific or medical gains have been made against this disease.

Like a systemic disease such as lichen planopilaris, that works itself through the entire human body, I firmly believe that the system of Babylon has also become just as pervasive throughout the world and has been active for generations and generations. This system is very destructive for the entire world, and that is why Satan has created it. He will eventually use it to install his man of sin as final world ruler, allowing him (Satan) to actively engage the world's forces for his own benefit.

Of course, unlike lichen planopilaris, there is a cure for Babylon. God is the cure and He will destroy it when the time comes. Ultimately, God will begin a huge push back against the religious and political systems – both called Babylon – that Satan has been using for thousands of years and He will do this during the Tribulation.

Revelation 17 & 18

This is what we see very clearly in Revelation 18. There, we understand that the Babylon system - created by Satan - is in full view. In Revelation 17, the destruction of the Babylon religious system occurred; and by the way, the Tribulation is when God pours out His wrath on Satan's kingdom - the earth - and also destroys the very thing that undergirds his system - Babylon. We're not there yet. The Tribulation has not started yet. We still need to see the rise of the Antichrist, the one-world system, then this system broken into ten manageable parts. Ultimately, the Tribulation begins when the Antichrist is empowered to successfully broker a peace treaty with Israel that is to last for seven years (or one "week" as stated in Daniel 9:27).

In Revelation 18, the political and commercial aspects of Babylon are in view and will also be destroyed by God. "And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird” (Revelation 18:2). The “he” in the text references the mighty angel that comes down from heaven to make the announcement.

Folks, this is what we are up against on this earth. As Christians, we are continually behind enemy lines in Satan's kingdom. We are on this earth to fulfill the Great Commission. During our work here, we will encounter and be affected by the corruption of Satan's Babylon. It cannot be helped. It is present, palpable, and very much alive. It is also being allowed to grow with tremendous ferocity and global coverage. It is the foundation upon which all earthly governments rest. Every government, to one extent or another, is empowered by Babylon.

This should not surprise us as Christians, but it does at times, doesn't it? It should not cause us to wail, moan, and wring our hands about the terrible things that we see occurring on this earth. It's not as if God has not forewarned us. While we should do what we can within the legal system to stand against the system and its inherent evil, we should keep in mind that we will not be given success.

Will God Save Nations or People?

But we cannot expect that God is going to save any nation on earth except Israel. He may choose to provide respite in some individual circumstances that involve His elect. He may also decide to hold back the powers of darkness here and there, to keep them in check. But ultimately, He will do as He sees fit, accomplishing what is best for His children. Of course, in the end, He will reap all the glory.

It's probably good that we cannot see beyond the veil that separates this physical realm from the spiritual realm. Some have been given brief glimpses of it, and we can read about those in the Bible. Daniel was one. John was another. Elijah certainly saw beyond the veil, as did Paul. Most importantly, Jesus saw behind the veil when it coincided with the Father's purpose. Numerous prophets saw things they related to us in the pages of Holy Writ, but one wonders if they were fully able to understand them when they saw them. There are obviously and logically things in the spiritual realm that are either too frightening or too remarkable for us to understand from our vantage point.

So, what does all this mean for the Christian? In the end, what we are allowed to see of Satan's spiritual kingdom, we see as symptoms in this life. We do not see the actual causes of those symptoms. Unfortunately, many still seem not to recognize them for what they are and believe that more work, more effort, and more prayer and trust in God will bring about the needed change that is desired by so many.

I really do not believe it is wise to get caught up emotionally in what Satan is being allowed to do to this world. We can and should have a greater heart for evangelism, but too many are still involved in fighting our government to see that 150,000 people still die every day. What is more important for them, a revived government or salvation?

Satanic Corruption Pervades the Globe

We know there is corruption in most, if not all, governments. We know that this corrupt evil is alive and breathing and that it is pervading the globe. Yet we do not actually see the malevolence itself, but the results of that malevolence upon which governments are built. Let's not forget that the system of Babylon saturates the hearts of everyone who is not part of God's kingdom, doesn't it? It's everywhere, all around us, and this system was designed to be the antithesis of God's kingdom.

The other day, I was trying to pull out of a gas station after filling the tank. As I approached the exit, two cars were coming in and each of them turned left right in front of me as if they had the right of way. Had I not been watching, an accident would have occurred. I recall looking at the driver in the second car, who gave me what she thought was a withering stare while she said something with an angry expression that I could not make out. The first driver hadn't even looked at me, as if I had not been there.

I saw the results or symptoms of selfishness in two drivers. Fortunately, I was going slowly and there was no harm done. I did not see what actually caused their self-centered behavior. Was it because they have grown more self-centered because they have never received Christ's salvation? It could be.

As another example, I have read reports of rioting that people threatened to do if Mr. Obama lost the election, or looting, as Hurricane Sandy approached land. In another article, I read where high school students posted all sorts of nonsense and vile remarks directed at Mr. Obama. All of these remarks - from both sides - were completely lacking in respect and many were even filthy, yet these remarks are still only the external symptom of the underlying problem, which is what the Babylon system creates. I cannot see into their hearts to determine exactly what motivated them to say what they said, though in general, we know that it is the sin nature that leans toward favoring Satan's agenda and kingdom.

We see a world of people acting out and committing criminal acts, but in the end, these things are still symptoms of the underlying spiritual problem. We see instances of corruption that rise to the surface here and there and we are shocked. We are appalled. We do not understand how things like this can happen. Well, we should have a better understanding of it than we do, as it is clearly revealed in Scripture.

Even those people who have cataloged one instance after another within certain governmental administrations seem to miss the point. These things are always there, but they are hidden most of the time. Every once in a while, something rises to the surface, which we notice, and it offends our sensibilities, as it should. But it really should not surprise us, should it? Sometimes I wonder if these incidents occur because the elite is attempting to misdirect us or is taking care of a problem within their own ranks?

Truth or Misdirection?

Was Gen. Petraeus forced to resign because he wouldn't go along with the administration's convoluted explanation of Benghazi? Was Petraeus set up by the elite because of his refusal to go along?

Bill Clinton lied to the American people about whether he'd had any sexual liaison with Monica Lewinsky. Though impeached, he did not leave office, and he is still highly sought after as a speaker today. There have been many instances of politicians having affairs - both Democrats and Republicans - and not all of them were forced out.

Is all this "noise" in the media simply another misdirect so that Benghazi becomes less and less of a concern for Americans? I wouldn't be surprised, but it is difficult to know until it all plays itself out.

For one thing, we know that the attention span of the average American is far less than what it used to be. Again, I just don't believe that we truly understand the actual depth of corruption in our government. If the real truth came out, can you imagine how people would react? I'm speaking of people who have at least some moral fiber at work in their lives.

God's Word explains the whole process of the Times of the Gentiles, from Nebuchadnezzar's Babylonian Kingdom until the time in the future when Jesus physically returns. Then, He will destroy all the kingdoms of men and establish His own Kingdom.

The system of Babylon is alive and well. According to the Bible, we will never get a handle on it. We will never overcome it (except with-in ourselves through the strength of Jesus). In Christ, it will also not finally overcome us, though it will give us tremendous problems in this life as we travel through from here to eternity.

It's About Salvation, Not Governments

Remember, the greatest victory is not that an evil government is successfully pushed back. The greatest victory is when a lost person finds salvation that only comes from Jesus on the basis of what He accomplished for us approximately 2,000 years ago.

That has been and will be the greatest victory for human beings. The most interesting thing is that God will do this in good times and bad. He will do this during times of peace and times of war. He will do this when we actually see the symptoms of large-scale political corruption and when things appear to be running smoothly in the seeming absence of that corruption.

From the posts, articles, and comments I have seen lately on many Christians' social network pages and blogs, it seems to me that many are working themselves toward a heart attack. They are so angry and so beside themselves with frustration that they do not know what to do except rant.

Unfortunately, they are unable to see, as I have mentioned so many times, that God is in charge of all outcomes. He neither needs us nor relies on us to bring His will to fruition. He simply does it and allows us to be part of the process if we are committed to Him and His purposes.

Babylon Has a Divine Appointment

The system of Babylon is very much alive and well on planet earth. This system is what has given birth to tremendous corruption and unchecked evil throughout the earth. The Bible tells us that this same system has much more work to do, and it certainly appears that God is going to allow this to occur before He utterly destroys it.

When Jesus returns to this earth, it is interesting to note that the system Satan built and Antichrist relied on to put him in power will have been destroyed. God will have already demolished the system of Babylon that Satan has used for thousands of years and that the final "man of sin" will have used as a step-ladder to gain control of the world. Once that happens, he has no more use for the Babylon system. The Antichrist will stand alone and will demand to be worshiped as God. Having been fully empowered in the supernatural by Satan himself, he will need nothing else to buttress his stand and position before the world.

When Jesus returns, He will kill the Antichrist, and in fact, both the Antichrist and False Prophet will be the very first two individuals who come to occupy the Lake of Fire. They will be tossed into it alive.

What About You?

For us in the here and now, we need to focus on what God is doing, not what we want Him to do or what we think he should be doing. We need to understand how God is moving throughout society – what He is allowing and directing and what He is negating. We cannot use our own human logic to determine this (such as it is). We must learn what He tells us in His Word. His ways are above our ways.

This age is coming to a close. Before it closes, there will be hell on earth. I see the system of Babylon growing in scope and energy. It would appear that God has given the go-ahead because the time is short. Satan needs to move and God is allowing him.

Do we really believe we can honestly push back against the system of Babylon that Satan created and has used and perfected since time out of mind? The changes that are coming to America and this world are major, and they will affect every aspect of society. Christians will feel the pinch, and it will likely include persecution that rises to a level we have not seen in history in a very long time. How will you respond to it? Will you try to take on the system in your own strength, or will you simply understand that this is what God is allowing and then entrust yourself to the One who saves us from ourselves?

Push back where you can and in His strength. Do not expect to overturn Satan's system. Our job is to resist evil and preach the Word to a dying world.

Summing Up Before Moving On ...

As I have previously indicated, I have been reading through many of Dr. Dennis Cuddy's articles (as well as others) and summarizing or commenting on them here. He takes concepts that others use for sensationalism and simply presents them in intelligent and pragmatic terms. I applaud him for that.

I've read books by any number of people who believe in all types of conspiracies. I've watched their videos as well. They often appear to me to be so out of the loop that I find it difficult to believe they could rein themselves in even if they wanted to do that.

Agents of Disinformation?

There is one individual who has a large website with plenty of news videos and articles. He's also had a show on TV in which the goal was to learn what was really behind many of the things that we see as conspiracies.

However, due to Cuddy's intelligence, education, and astuteness, his articles read nothing like these types of overly hyped conspiracy articles. This is why I have taken the time to discuss his articles and have even pointed out that those who read my articles would do very well to read his articles and books because he goes into much more depth than I do here.

I have previously presented much information in the way of the global elite and how that group works. I have tried to show from Scripture that it is not illogical to believe that Satan himself would have tried (and likely succeeded) to form such a group of human beings who were (and remain) thoroughly dedicated to him. Their dedication provides Satan with the direct path and ability to bring his plans to life on this earth. I believe that this group - whatever we want to call it - sits at the very top of the organizational structure, just under Satan and his minions.

Paul informs us about the way this group works in Ephesians 6:12. "For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the powers, against the world forces of this darkness, against the spiritual forces of wickedness in the heavenly places."

It seems to me – and I could be wrong – that Paul is noting two different groups, yet both are controlled by the same overarching force. First, he tells us that we are not struggling against flesh, which is another way to say that we do not war against other human beings. The implication, of course, is that our struggle is against those forces that empower human beings to do what they do. He notes that our struggle is against rulers, powers, and world forces of this darkness. This gives me the sense of supernatural beings working very closely with human beings in order to accomplish Satan's plans.

There are some who believe that "aliens" walk among us, and they go to great pains to prove their point. Frankly, I don't know if that is true or not. I do believe that aliens are nothing more than demonic powers that impersonate aliens from other planets or galaxies.

I also believe it is completely possible – as we see in the New Testament repeatedly – that these demons can certainly come to possess a person. What would happen if there were human beings that were fully willing to submit themselves to these powerful supernatural demons in order to become possessed and even controlled by them?

If this occurred, then there would absolutely be a very direct connect between human beings and the demonic. Is it possible that many within the global elite have this type of union with the demonic? If so, would those demons be able to accomplish things through those human beings so that Satan's wishes were carried out in this physical plane? I believe this could very well be the case.

We need to remember that while the Bible shows us that seemingly innocent people have been overpowered and even possessed by evil spirits, we also know without doubt that there are many groups and people who willingly worship Satan. They follow their own special services and liturgies in the hopes of gaining more power from Satan in exchange for worshiping him. Most of these people dabble in the occult and more often than not are overpowered by it.

However, I believe it is a safe bet to assume that those generational families that make up the elite were carefully chosen by Satan. Because of this, he needs to use them for as long as possible. In order to do that, he needs to ensure that his power in and through them never comes to a point of destroying them unless he determines he is done with them.

Humans Used by Satan

Books about Helena Blavatsky, Alice Bailey, or Jane Roberts (Seth Speaks) often show that their years of being connected to some supernatural being that worked through them tends to take its toll on them. Jane Roberts was so used and overcome by Seth that many thought they became one and the same toward the end of her life, with Seth having dominance. Roberts was gone. Only Seth remained.

Bailey penned 24 books, dictated to her by the “Tibetan” who eventually became known as “Djwal Khul.” Blavatsky, who came before Bailey, wrote about ten or so books, but through her the Theosophical Society was created. Bailey continued the Society and grew it into what became known as the Lucifer Trust. The name changed eventually to Lucis Trust.

It is clear that Satan has had his very personal hand on specific individuals throughout history. They have been chosen to accomplish some purpose for him. In 168 BC, Antiochus Epiphanes went into the Jewish Temple in Jerusalem and desecrated it by setting up a statue of Zeus, slaughtering a pig on the altar, and sprinkling the blood around the Holy of Holies. This led to the Maccabean Revolt.

During the days of Jesus, Judas was handpicked to betray our Lord. In fact, on the night Jesus was betrayed, the biblical text notes that Satan actually entered into Judas (cf. Luke 23:3).

I believe Hitler was also personally chosen by Satan to accomplish what he accomplished. He murdered over 6 million Jews, as well as millions from other ethnicities. This is not a human being. It is a person who has become overtaken by supernatural evil.

In the future, Satan will personally select another individual, fully empower him and cause him to become the greatest in all the earth. This man – known as the man of sin, or the Antichrist – will rise to dominate the entire world as leader of the last Gentile empire prior to the return of Jesus Christ.

It is clear from numerous points in history that Satan has chosen individuals to carry out his plans. Why would he not choose to create a group such as the one that has become known variously as the global or power elite, the Illuminati, the secret cabal, or any other name that has been attached to them? I think it is completely within the scope of belief that he would do this and has done it.

I've explained that it would be very logical (and within the scope of God's allowance) for Satan to work through one group as a CEO works with and through his top-level management team. They in turn take what is given to them, turn around, and work with their respective teams and so on and so forth until the plan is carried through all the ranks within a corporation.

Why would Satan not use this method, especially if we consider that he cannot be everywhere at once, nor is he infinite as God is infinite? While Satan is eternal, as we are, and has tremendous supernatural ability, he doesn't even come close to being like God in any sense. Human beings are more like God (though we are not God) because unlike Satan, we were made in God's image.

It's Plausible

So the plausibility of one large group of fallen human beings who have been wooed to Satan, directed by him, and even possessed by him is not at all difficult for me to believe. I believe that to the members of that group, he has given wealth beyond what we can imagine and power to accomplish his goals in exchange for their loyalty to him. Think of a mob boss and those under him as being similar to their structure. Then multiply it times one million or so and you begin to understand the power and ability that lies within this one group.

As I've stated before, I believe all of this really began in Genesis 11 with Nimrod and his ability to gather men to himself. Once he had done that, he found a way to get them to do what he wanted to do, and that first project was in building the Tower of Babel. That is where Satan attempted to create a base that would work as the foundation to a world system that he wanted to create.

Of course, we know that God put that system at that point in time on hold, but Satan went to work crafting the same system anyway. This time, though, it would take much longer, because by confusing the languages God ensured that people ultimately would end up separating themselves by language into new culture groups (cf. Genesis 11).

Again, though, Satan was not told he could not ever do that. He simply learned that what he had tried to do would not be allowed to happen that soon. He never gave up, and as we progress through history, we see the rise and fall of dictators.

When America rose into a nation, I fully believe that American powers were connected to the global elite, which had already long existed. Even though this type of thinking is often swept aside as being fully conspiratorial in nature, if we are honest about it, we see that the power elite has given too much of their hand away in many cases.

This has resulted in “what socialist author H.G. Wells called 'The Open Conspiracy,' as prominent people such as Bill Clinton have openly written in support of world government. It will probably be a World Social- *ist Government, synthesizing western capitalism and eastern communism.”*⁸⁰

The Conspiracy is Now Brazenly Open

While the mechanism for change has evolved into one that Wells and others refer to as “the open conspiracy” (in that many of the major players have been placed in positions within our government that allow them the ability to effect change throughout society), the real power players in this drama - in my opinion - remain steadfastly deep within the shadows. I don't think it's because they are scared of coming out into the open but because they simply see no reason to right now.

I also believe that this will change as time moves on. In other words, the coming new world order is the big secret that everyone now speaks openly about and few even try to negate it.

For America, this secret movement has been in existence for quite some time. *“In 1891, gold and diamond magnate Cecil Rhodes formed a secret society, the Society of the Elect, to 'absorb the wealth of the world' and 'to take the government of the whole world...Rhodes' conspiratorial secret society lasted almost 60 years. By that time, enough members of the society and Rhodes scholars had penetrated the areas of politics, economics, journalism and education, so that the society was simply replaced by a network of power elite, who would openly pursue world government’.”*⁸¹

Cuddy goes on to point out that the man who made the above remarks - Prof. Carroll Quigley, of Georgetown University; and incidentally, Bill Clinton's mentor - also said, “The [Rhodes] scholarships were merely a façade to conceal the secret society, or, more accurately,

they were to be one of the instruments by which members of the secret society could carry out Rhodes' purpose."^{82 83}

Cuddy presents information on the growing existence of secret societies within America and how they have sought for control of various aspects of society: *"During the presidency of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the trend toward socialism was obvious, but even after World War II it continued, as U.S. Rep. Carroll Reece on April 6, 1956 delivered a speech saying, 'We approach closer and closer to socialism,' and 'The foundation-financed cartel promotes the idea of government by an elite'."*⁸⁴

A Rhodes scholar by the name of *"Walt Rostow who, in The United States in the World Arena (1960), proposed 'an end to nationhood as it has been historically defined' and who 'became Deputy National Security Advisor for President John F. Kennedy, whose Secretary of State was Rhodes scholar Dean Rusk, who in September 1961 issued "Freedom From War: The U.S. Program for General and Complete Disarmament in a Peaceful World'"*⁸⁵

This move from nationhood to the "world arena" has been something that many leaders within America have attempted to inculcate within society for decades. In fact, many have also pledged allegiance to this coming new world order.

By the time we get to John F. Kennedy, there are already things in place that would help to achieve this, and much of it had to do with something that "Richard Gardner wrote in 'The Hard Road to World

⁸⁵ Ibid

*Order,' that it would involve 'an end run around national sovereignty, eroding it piece by piece'."*⁸⁶

Too Many Connections

Interestingly enough, there turns out to be a deep connection between Gardner and Bill Clinton, as Cuddy explains: "[Gardner] believed [an end run around national sovereignty] would 'accomplish much more than the old-fashioned frontal assault,' and he further explained how GATT could be involved in the process.

"Gardner would eventually become an advisor on the United Nations to CFR member Bill Clinton's first presidential campaign, after which he would become U.S. Ambassador to Spain, from which would come Marxist Javier Solana as the head of NATO with the support of the Clinton administration."⁸⁷ (emphasis added)

Please take the time to note the text in bold. Gardner was connected to Clinton, and because of that connection became the U.S. Ambassador to Spain. Javier Solana (then head of NATO) went on to become deeply involved in the burgeoning European Union and held several very high positions within that body.⁸⁸ There are many connections that the average American never sees simply because he does not look for them.

There have been connections between Bill Clinton and Great Britain's Tony Blair. Blair has been recognized as a socialist for some time (Cuddy notes that Blair is/was a vice-president of Socialist International) and in 1998 called for what was termed "ethical socialism."

While it is relatively easy for most people who know anything about socialism to point to Clinton and many other Democratic presidential hopefuls, it is not as easy with people like the Bushes or Reagan. Yet again, as Cuddy points out, the whole move toward socialism has been a progress (or progressive movement) to bring socialism to pass one step at a time here in America. The Bushes emphasized national education with a very large education budget (No Child Left Behind).

⁸⁸ http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Javier_Solana

Schools and educators became accountable to the Department of Education. As Cuddy states, this certainly cannot be a move away from socialism, especially if one considers the fact that in the United States, the Federal government was created essentially to support the individual states. Yet over time, the Federal government has enacted more laws that put the states in the position of having to answer to the Federal government. This in and of itself is a form of National Socialism where the individual states lose their power and identity in favor of the Federal government gaining more.

We are aware of Clinton's efforts to pass a national health care bill during his tenure as president, causing at least one political pundit to note, "You can't think of a more Socialist program than the health care program that he [Bill Clinton] tried to get us to adopt."⁸⁹ Interestingly enough, that comment was stated by Milton Friedman on C-Span on November 20, 1994, not someone from FOX News.

However, Obamacare is not seen by most as having anything to do with socialism, is it? They might refer to it as "socialized" medicine, but in most cases, do they even really understand the ramifications of socialism in the first place? Let's also not forget that as far as the global elite are concerned, their goal is to create a two-tiered system, where they - as capitalists - are at the top while everyone else is relegated to socialism as their determined lifestyle. The reality is that this is the way it seems to be with most dictatorships, benevolent or not. The ones at the top always have whatever they want, using those at the bottom as workers in the hive.

Cuddy points out in great detail the involvement of another secret society, Skull and Bones, as well as other Fabian Socialist groups, some of whose members became presidents and statesmen in the U.S. Government. Over time, we have seen more of the Federal government's desire to condition Americans to be more accepting of greater restrictions of their Constitutional freedoms. They knew the best way to accomplish this was through events that produced enough fear within people that they would ask or expect our government to do whatever it could to keep us safe. We've discussed how 9/11 and other events either got us into a war, dialed back our freedoms, or both.

Wars and Rumors of Wars Continue

This is one of the biggest reasons that wars and rumors of war are never off the table. The elite need these things in order to condition and remold society into what they need society to become.

As I asked before, was the elite the reason why 9/11 (or the Oklahoma Bombing) occurred? I don't think so, and in reality, did they have to be? Doesn't it stand to reason that many terrorist activities occur throughout the globe in any given month? All the elite would need to do is wait for an event to occur that worked in their favor on a massive scale and then do nothing to keep it from happening. Obviously, for this to happen, the elite must have people very high in our government. Is that beyond the realm of possibility?

The U.S. is often seen by Muslim terrorists as the Great Satan. Israel is seen as the Little Satan. What terrorist does not want to see the downfall of the U.S.? Chances are great that as you are reading this, plans are being prepared by terrorists (of which the elite would learn) and decisions are being made to allow at least some of those plans to be carried out without interference. Alternatively, they can also use logic to determine that at some point in the future, terrorists will attempt to attack and from there, the globalists can then attempt to condition and remold society with reaction through the media.

Years ago, the push toward National Socialism needed to occur very slowly because it would have been extremely obvious what was happening. There would have been no way to hide it.

However, over time, as traditional values have been pushed out of the mainstream with more non-traditional values having replaced them, the continued move toward socialism is not so obvious. In fact, many – as mentioned – are so focused on one or two issues that they do not even see that socialism is overtaking America in great leaps.

A new world order almost seems right around the corner. Cuddy notes, *“The conditioning of the public in the past has been gradual, but as famous author H.G. Wells noted, the process will speed up in the end as the synthesis toward a World Socialist Government gains greater momentum.”*⁹⁰

But how does Nazism come into play regarding the new world order and the elite? How does any of this tie in with Hitler and his grand scheme to dominate and control the world while using the Muslim Brotherhood to do so?

Did the Nazi Plan Ever Die?

Dr. Dennis Cuddy states, “...*For some reason, most people do not seem to take [the secret Nazi plan for today] seriously, saying those Nazis from World War II are dead or too old to pose a real threat. They miss the importance of [Sumner] Welles’ statement [from the book The Time for Decision (1944)] that the German General Staff ‘made detailed plans for a later renewal of its attempt to dominate the world... when the favorable moment arrives... perhaps two generations from now,’ which means the plan had to include succession.*”⁹¹

Cuddy makes a very good point. Consider the fact that various groups – like Nazi hunters – have spent years tracking down original

Nazis for the purpose of bringing them to justice. When we understand that many of the Nazis died natural deaths because of their age, it is difficult for us to believe that any plan that originated with the Nazis would somehow be given another opportunity for revival. However, for all intents and purposes, this appears to be the case.

Can It Be True?

Most of us deny the possibility of any secret Nazi plan simply because it smacks too much of conspiracy. When thinking of Nazism, we normally think in terms of its military power and prowess, and of course Hitler and the deaths of millions of Jews. We generally do not consider the values and beliefs that became the very framework for Nazism, which is clearly delineated in the “National Socialist German Workers Party [Nazi Party].”⁹² How many of us truly get this?

To us, Hitler was Nazism. His deluded, godlike, and self-aggrandizing thinking led him to attempt to kill every last Jew, doing what he believed was a favor to God. At the same time, he worked diligently to create a socialist utopia for every German, as the Nazi machine swallowed up one part of Europe, then another, then another. The ultimate goal was really not found in the German military machine at all. That was merely the tool that was used to bring about the rise of German socialism. Today, it happens to be the Muslim Brotherhood.

One of Hitler's closest confidants, Himmler, came to realize that at some point, “Germany may have to capitulate militarily,”⁹³ but he stated never must the ideals, tenets, and beliefs of socialist Germany surrender. It was because of this underlying belief that Himmler did what he could to ensure that the plan of Nazism would continue to succeed at some point in the future, long after the Nazi war machine had been stopped. “Himmler organized everything right down to the *last detail regarding Nazis going underground and spreading throughout the world to fulfill their plan, perhaps in two generations.”*⁹⁴ Two generations from that point brought us to the 1990s.

It's All About Who You Know

Cuddy points out numerous connections between the Nazis and companies like Standard Oil and Krupp. These companies were controlled by the Rockefellers and Alfried Krupp, respectively. During WWII, no Standard Oil tankers were attacked by Hitler's armies, though others were attacked. Also interesting is that though Krupp was tried and convicted of war crimes, he was later given amnesty and all of his corporate assets and personal wealth returned to him.

By the late 1960s, long after the end of WWII, “Nazi agents had time to ascend to positions of power in the world.”⁹⁵ Though the war ended, the Nazis really didn't go away. They simply integrated into various parts of the world to carry on the goals of the German Socialist party (Nazi).

Too often, the term “Nazi” is seen as something that is very racially-oriented. For instance, Hitler is portrayed as hating blacks and others he considered to be unfit for life. The truth of the matter is that behind the Nazi profile lies the belief that a world built on socialism will not only survive, but prosper.

We need to remember, though, that those who prosper under this system are the ones at the top. Those underneath them - the workers - will be bound by socialism's limitations, while those at the top will enjoy the benefits of capitalism.

This is even the way it was when Communism in the USSR was at its height. Those at the top plundered society to have what they wanted.

⁹⁵ <http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis150.htm>

This included the best caviar, the best alcohol, high-priced “escorts,” expensive homes, furniture, and cars. The rest of the people of the USSR eked out a living and stood in bread lines that took two to three hours (or more) to get to the front of, where they were allowed to maybe buy two loaves of bread for their families.

Cuddy notes that, “it’s clear [U.S. High Commissioner of Germany John J.] McCloy and [John D.] Rockefeller were aware of high-profile Nazis who had been helped to escape to the U.S. at the end of WWII. And one can only wonder whether these Nazis might have been in contact over the years with those other Nazi agents who early in WWII spread throughout the world in order to fulfill today the secret Nazi plan...”⁹⁶

It is amazing how often in Cuddy's articles we come across the names of Rockefeller, Clinton, and Bush, not to mention Kissinger and many others who have become leaders in the political world and household names as well. They all have connections either as Rhodes scholars, Skull & Bones members, or both. It is also intriguing how these individuals appear to be the public faces of a group of people who want and need the world to become one where socialism reigns, yet they remain steadfastly in the shadows...for now.

The secret plan of the Nazis is fairly involved and often convoluted, at least seemingly so. They have a plan in place that incorporates this list that follows. The following list is by no means exhaustive, but merely something that I have put together to highlight some of the main tenets and principles within their plan.

- Mistrust: learns to not trust its government and leaders (and with good reason)
- Humanism: gives their children over to the humanistic “religion” that has guided public schools for decades

- Evolution: accepts the working hypothesis of evolution, which devalues human life
- Abortion: fully accepts the notion that unborn babies are merely fetal tissue and are not “murdered,” but simply removed from the womb
- New World Order: hears the constant call for a new world order
- Going Green: comes to accept the radical ideas of the “green” movement that places plants and animals above people
- One-World Currency: hears continual talk of a need for a one-world currency
- Global Socialism: becomes part of the growing movement toward world sovereignty vs. narrow nationalism
- International Law: succumbs to international law over national law (i.e. the Constitution)
- Replaces Values: notes the removal of biblical values from public; sees the replacement of biblical values with humanistic relativism
- God is Dead: succumbs to the idea that Christianity (like God) is dead
- Christianity Outmoded: replaces Christianity with New Age ideals, born of the occult
- New Agism: agrees that all religions should lead to peace among all people and are incorporated within one movement: New Age beliefs

Essentially, then, the Nazi secret plan is the plan that the global elite uses as its blueprint to bring in a new world order. It has worked tirelessly to overcome the foundational principles of the United States in order to create a perceived need for transnational entities, as opposed to individual or narrow nationalistic pride.

Transnational Factions

What is even more remarkable is the make-up of those on the Supreme Court. According to Cuddy, a “transnational” faction exists and has been in place for some time now. In the article he wrote in 2009 titled The Power Elite and the Secret Nazi Plan, he indicated that this faction of the Supreme Court consists of “Justices Breyer, Souter, Stevens, Ginsburg, and at times, Justice Kennedy.”⁹⁷

Of course, since that article was published, Justices Souter and Stevens have both retired, replaced with Sonia Sotomayer and Elena Kagan. These two justices both favor using international law within the court system of the United States as opposed to the U.S. Constitution, upon which this nation was born.

Going back to Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun, Cuddy quoted his asstating in 1987 that “U.S. courts must look beyond national interest to the ‘mutual interests of all nations in a smoothly functioning international legal regime’ and must ‘consider if there is a course that furthers, rather than impedes, the development of an ordered international system.”⁹⁸

We can see that this statement reflects the ideals and beliefs of the secret plan of the Nazis to create a system of socialism that has been coming to the fore for decades. Also noteworthy is the fact that Blackmun was appointed by Republican president, Richard Nixon.

Take or Leave the U.S. Constitution

This past March of 2012, Leon Panetta spoke before a Senate Armed Services Committee hearing and told those present, “Our goal would be to seek international permission... Whether or not we would want to get permission from the Congress—I think those are issues we would have to discuss as we decide what to do here.”⁹⁹ (emphasis added)

Of all the blatant anti-Constitution statements to make, this appears to be the height of hubris! Under the U.S. Constitution, Congress approves war and the military actions of the United States that go along with it. However, we already know that Mr. Obama's administration sidestepped Congress and put our military on the ground in Libya by calling it a kinetic military action. Congress is trying to ensure that this does not happen again through upcoming legislation.

“Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., R-N.C., has introduced a resolution declaring that should the president use offensive military force without authorization of an act of Congress, ‘it is the sense of Congress’ that such an act would be an impeachable high crime and misdemeanor.”¹⁰⁰

In the end, though, this is what the “powers that be” behind the scenes want to happen. They need the United States government to get beyond the U.S. Constitution. In doing this, they will ensure that America becomes part of the coming socialism that will engulf the entire globe. Obviously, it won't happen without a fight, but it's a guarantee that they're prepared for any fight that comes their way.

The Third Reich Died – The Plan Lives On

In 1945, Hitler gave an address that included these words: “Let them be conscious of the fact that our task, that of continuing the building of a National Socialist State, represents the work of the coming centuries, which places every single person under an obligation always to serve the common interest and to subordinate his own advantage to this end."¹⁰¹ (emphasis added)

⁹⁹ <http://lubbockonline.com/interact/blog-post/may/2012-03-09/obama-would-seek-permission-war-united-nations-rather-congress#.UKVIEIYzzOw>

The "them" in the quote is something he is saying to "Nazi Party head Martin Bormann and others [who will] continue the work of the Nazis after Hitler's death."¹⁰² Hitler expected the work of Nazism to continue for several centuries. However long it took, it is what needed to be done. It's obvious from this quote that Hitler realized that long after the German military machine was stopped, work toward global socialism would need to continue. Of course, we also know that Hitler looked toward and expected to see a thousand-year Reich.

It is astounding that most people see Nazism as little more than a racist machine that sought to eliminate all other races that were "inferior" to the Aryan race, especially Jews. When Nazism is seriously studied, though, it appears to be much more than that.

While Hitler did think of the German people as superior to all other ethnicities, he was only interested in eradicating those he believed were inferior (mainly the Jews) in order to create a civilization of people throughout the globe that would fully adopt the view that socialism should prevail and was best for all of humanity. I'm not excusing Hitler's murderous behavior in any way, shape, or form. I'm simply pointing out that the beliefs contained within the goals of Nazism are, at their core, a push toward national (and ultimately, global) socialism of the German people and then the world.

In the final analysis, this is the goal of those within the global elite, who in some ways carry forth the goals and aspirations of the Nazi agenda because they also believe that they were meant to rule the rest of us. To this end, they have been working for generations and will continue to work until they see their dreams and aspirations brought to global fruition.

The “powers that be” will use whatever group is at hand, or create their own, in order to push this world toward its preordained agenda. As we’ve noted, there are many ways to accomplish this:

- wars and rumors of wars
- portraying capitalism in a negative light, even though the PE has benefited greatly from it and will continue to do so
- keeping things in society in a constant state of flux
- condemning the traditional values of Christianity and portraying them as hateful, judgmental, and narrow
- providing entitlements to the poor while draining the financial resources of a nation

All of the above (as simply a partial list) helps to keep this world in a constant state of flux that creates a sense of fear and foreboding. This is done to keep society off balance so that the average person will not be able to think in terms of peace and safety, which would allow them to sit back and relax. In such an environment, the society is not willing to move toward anything different because it has become content in itself.

Bringing Nations to Their Knees Financially

At all costs, the elite must continue to impoverish individual nations, including the United States. It must make society believe that war is only a breath away and that the world itself is moving toward absolute chaos. Only when society comes to accept this as truth will it call for something different and unique that will bind all people together in some type of real and honest unity. That, of course, will simply play into the hands of the elite and is what they have been conditioning people to accept.

The elite has mastery over the art of misdirection and uses it constantly to keep society off-balance. It leaves people thinking that they do not really know or understand what's coming in life. Because of that, many will clamor for more controls (taking away our freedoms) in order to gain some small semblance of peace. Of course, what the average person fails to understand is that this coming "peace" is peace in name only. It will provide nothing beneficial to anyone; only a form of imprisonment.

Folks, the only true security, peace, and dignity is found in the salvation that is offered by God in Jesus. He came into this world, He lived a sinless life, and He died a horrible death in order to fulfill the Law as set forth by God.

I have always found that interesting: that God would require certain things, including the shedding of blood for the remission of sins, and when it came time to find a person who could righteously fulfill all of the necessary requirements, the only Person found was the One who - as God - was born into this life, taking on the form of humanity.

God did not simply tap someone on the shoulder and ask them if they were willing to be the vicarious atonement. Nope. He made the requirements and then He personally fulfilled them. No one else would qualify. He did it all.

What do you say about Jesus? He is either God the Son, who did as the Bible says He did, or He is not. It's one or the other. Each person will have to answer that question as they stand before God in the afterlife. I would strongly suggest doing it now. See the truth. Embrace the truth. Enter into a relationship with the God of the universe by receiving His salvation.

There are two world orders coming. The first is one that is built on the system of Babylon; Satan's kingdom. It will promise many things and deliver none of them. In the end, it will be fully destroyed by the coming of One who will bring the second world order. Nothing will stand against it, and unlike man's empires, it will outlast anything that humanity has created.

Either God is telling us the truth or we have put our faith in humanity's lies. What is your choice?

So, What Now?

Iwould be completely remiss if I ended this book without offering at least some kind of solution to the problems we face in this world. If you're not a Christian, then the solution I'm pointing out is outlined in the next chapter, which is also the final chapter of this book.

It has come to be the way I end all of my books. There is no more important decision each person can or will make than whether or not to receive the only true salvation that is available, the very salvation that Jesus Christ made possible for us. If you do not know Jesus, then please, I cannot urge you strongly enough, receive His salvation and enter into a life-changing relationship with Him. It means the difference between heaven or hell.

However, if you are an authentic Christian, then this chapter will hopefully end on a high note for you. What do we do as authentic Christians who are bound to face increasing erosion of our rights under the U.S. Constitution and greater tyranny from our own government?

There really is only one answer of which I am aware. It is twofold in nature, but it is the answer that the Bible repeatedly gives us as the means to peace in our daily walk with God.

- Submit to His will in all things
- Praise Him in the midst of all things

Honestly, is there anything else a Christian can or should do? If we believe that God controls all outcomes and that everything that comes our way will eventually work out according to His will for our good and His glory, how can we not submit ourselves to Him and praise Him for all things?

Difficulties of Life

I will admit that this is very difficult for me. In essence, it is the very substance of what being a Christian means. I like being in control as much as possible. When I consider what is ahead of us, I do become somewhat nervous and apprehensive. Will the government be able to successfully remove our guns from society? If so, what will that mean for me and my ability to protect my family from home invasions, for instance?

Is the Lord protecting me anyway? If so, should I not be casting all my cares on Him because He cares for me? That's what Peter tells us in 1 Peter 5:7. But then Paul tells us that the man who does not care for his own household is worse than an infidel (cf. 1 Timothy 5:8). That means quite a bit in reality, from things like providing food and a roof overhead to issues that revolve around safety. What do I do? How about if work becomes so difficult that we lose our jobs?

All of these things and more are the things that concern me. Some would say I'm borrowing trouble that may never come. Others would say that I should not be concerned about those things until they come.

The truth is that we live in a world that is constantly changing and becoming even more evil. We have talked about these things throughout these pages. Yet, in spite of everything, God is fully in control of all outcomes. If we are His – as the Bible assures us we are through faith in the finished work of Christ – then will He not provide? Will He not take care of us?

Can We Trust God or Not?

The only and obvious answer is that He will. In the here and now, I can and should prepare for coming hardships. I should do what I can to have things in my pantry and storehouse that will keep us going for up to three months – more if I can swing it. It is important that each person do what they can in order to not have to depend upon the government or others when the bottom falls out.

At the same time, we make these preparations knowing that God watches over us and cares for us. We do not know what will happen tomorrow. We do not know how far into the future total financial collapse may be. We do not know when the Rapture will occur, nor do we know when the Tribulation will begin.

Until these things occur, we also do not know how bad things will become for the average person, do we? There really is no way to know.

I believe there are many portions of Scripture that speak to the need to trust Him and let Him deal with the problems that He allows to come into our lives. Let me close this chapter by focusing on wisdom from a few of the Psalms. Memorize these. Take them with you in your heart wherever you go. Learn to let them speak to you as you contemplate the problems that face your life.

The only solution to any problem we face is God. The only solution to any nervousness, fear, or trepidation we experience is God. The only solution for whatever comes into our life that brings with it sorrow, tragedy, or abysmal problems are with God. He and He alone is the answer.

It is up to us to submit these problems and difficulties to Him until we can freely and completely release them into His care. That is a must, and it truly separates those who merely say they are Christians from those who actually are Christians.

Psalm 100

*Shout joyfully to the Lord, all the earth.
Serve the Lord with gladness;
Come before Him with joyful singing.
Know that the Lord Himself is God;
It is He who has made us, and not we ourselves;
We are His people and the sheep of His pasture.
Enter His gates with thanksgiving
And His courts with praise.
Give thanks to Him, bless His name.
For the Lord is good;

This is what we are to do. We are to first of all shout, and we are to shout with joy to the Lord. The Psalmist is literally commanding everything on the earth to call out to God with praise. That should be our first and continuous order of business.

Paul emphasizes this as well when he says that we should praise God in all things (cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:18). In doing so, we are recognizing that God is in charge of our lives.

But some might say, "Fred, that is very difficult to believe!" Yes, I know it is, but because we have a challenging time believing in something does not mean that we give up trying to believe it. It means that we have to persevere that much more until that fear turns to belief and belief turns to knowledge.

We should praise God in all things. Difficult, but it must be done if we are to exercise faith in God and His control over our lives.

Next, we should serve the Lord, and we should do this how? We should serve Him with gladness. That again is often very difficult, but there is only one solution to our doubts: perseverance. We cannot give up here. We must praise God with everything that is within us and continuously so that we will find ourselves emotionally removed from the circumstances that wish to bind us in fear.

The Psalmist then goes on to say that our lives should be filled with joyful singing and we should come to recognize that God is our Lord. He is our Shepherd, and like the loving and careful shepherd who takes care of all the sheep in His care, God will surely do the same thing with us.

Since we are the sheep of His pasture, it is logical then to assume that He is the One who provides for us. His eye is always on us, our troubles, and our lives in general. He does not forget us and is always mindful of our frailties.

The Psalmist then reminds us that God is good. He is far more than good, but this one word helps us understand that because of the fact that He is good, He will do what is best for us. He is not some evil being bent on teasing us unmercifully until we bend to His deceitful will!

God has only our best interests in His heart and seeks to bring those to fruition every day. The Psalmist ends with two declarations. God's lovingkindness will never fail because it is eternal, and He is faithful to authentic Christians in every generation. These are two truths upon which Christians stand. We must never forget them. We must always be aware of them and we must allow these truths to penetrate our hearts and lives in order that He will be glorified in and through us.

God is not going to leave us, and when we are tempted to think that He has or will, we need to remind ourselves of the truth of Scripture. Romans 8 tells us He will never leave or forsake us and that because we are in Christ, not only are we not on the receiving end of God's condemnation, but we will never be on the receiving end of it!

God is good. His goodness lasts forever and it is always directed toward those who are part of His family – those who are in relationship to Jesus Christ.

The only solution that I am aware of related to the problems this life throws at us is found in submitting our will to God and praising Him in all things. Try as I might, I have found no other Scriptural remedy for life's problems, and even though I do not live these things perfectly, God always brings me back to them.

My prayer for you is that He will do the same thing for you so that your life will be filled with His peace, you will learn to trust Him in all things, and you will be freed to fulfill the Great Commission. May He be praised forever.

The End

Do you know when you will die? Are you aware of the day and hour when you will slip from this life into eternity? I'm betting you are not privy to that information. So why are you living as if you do know when it will happen? Putting a decision about Jesus off until another day is taking a huge chance because of the fact that you do not know when you will die. That is plainly simple, and logic alone demands that you do not put this decision off. Yet you do, because the thought of becoming a Christian makes you feel uncomfortable.

You wrongly believe that to become a Christian means that you have to change in a major way before Jesus will accept you. It means to you giving up the things you love now because if you love them, then obviously they are wrong and God does not love them.

You are putting the cart before the horse. You must understand that God is not rejecting you. He is not standing there, tapping His foot, demanding that you eliminate those things that He does not like before you can come to Him for salvation.

If you (or anyone) could do that, you would not need His salvation at all. It is because you and I do things that are not pleasing to Him that we need His salvation.

What do you do that you would like to no longer do? Do you drink excessively until you cannot control it? Do you play around with drugs? Do you eat too much food until you have become overweight, lethargic and sickly?

What other things are in your life that you do not like? Are you drawn to illicit extra-marital affairs? Do you have a problem with lust? Are you a shopaholic? Do you tend to tell lies a great deal because it makes you feel important, or to hide things about your life?

Do you find that you do not like people and you would prefer to be around animals or out in the woods than around people? Are you a workaholic? Do you place a high value on money and you find that you work very hard to obtain it?

Here's the problem. The enemy of our souls comes to us and tells us that God will never accept us until we get rid of those things. He lies to us that God essentially wants us "perfect" before He will be willing to meet us and grant us eternal life. This is completely untrue.

The other lie that our enemy tells us is that we should not become a Christian because the fun in our life will fly out the door. We will no longer be able to drink or do the fun things we enjoy now. We start to think that coming to God means becoming a doormat for people and having to fill our life with things we do not want to ever do.

These are all lies, and unfortunately, too many people believe them. First of all, God does not expect you to be “perfect” before you come to Him for salvation. If that were the case, no one would be able to ever approach Him.

Secondly, God does not say that He is going to take away all the things we enjoy and replace them with things we hate. What is wrong with enjoying the lake on your boat? What is wrong with spending a day with the family fishing or just relaxing in the mountains? There is nothing wrong with these things.

What God will do is begin to remove the things that have ensnared you so that life is actually draining from you, but you are not aware of it. For instance, maybe you drink excessively and you have tried everything you can think of to quit. You have gone to AA meetings, spent thousands of dollars on this program or that, and you have even used your own will power to free yourself from the addiction to alcohol, all to no avail.

The question is not: do I need to quit before I come to Jesus? The question is: am I willing to allow Him to work in and through me to take away the addiction I have to alcohol? Do you see the difference? Are you willing to allow Him to work in you to break that addiction so that you will become a healthier person, one who is able to think straight and one who learns to rely on Him for strength? That is all He wants you to be able to do. He knows you cannot break that addiction (or any addiction for that matter) with your own strength and willpower. Are you willing to allow Him to do it in and through you?

What if you are a workaholic? What if you have “things” like a boat, a house in Cancun, a large bank account, four cars, and more? Do you think that God is going to ask you to give it up, or worse, do you think that God will simply come in and take all of that from you? I know of nothing in Scripture that tells us He will do that.

What God will do with all of those who come to Him trusting Him for salvation is one thing, which begins the moment we receive salvation and will continue until the day we stand before Him. He will begin to create within us the character of Jesus (cf. Ephesians 2:10).

Here is a verse from the Old Testament that was said originally through the prophet Ezekiel to the people of Israel. While this was specifically stated to the Jews, it is applicable to all who receive salvation through Jesus Christ.

"I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you; I will take the heart of stone out of your flesh and give you a heart of flesh. I will put My Spirit within you and cause you to walk in My statutes, and you will keep My judgments and do them" (Ezekiel 36:26-27).

God is speaking here through Ezekiel, and He is saying that He will give the people a new heart of flesh, removing that old heart of stone. This is God's responsibility. God is the One who makes that happen. We are told in the book of Hebrews that God is the Author and Finisher of our faith (cf. Hebrews 12:2). This tells me that God is the One who changes me from within so that over time, my desires are slowly turned into His desires.

I recall years ago thinking that God wanted to do everything in my life that I did not want Him to do. I fell into the asinine belief that He wanted to change everything about me. What I learned is that yes, there are things that God does want to change about me. However, there is a lot that God originally gave me that He has also enhanced and used for His glory.

Maybe you are a workaholic who thinks that working hard is something God does not want you to do. This is not necessarily the case. He may have given you the ability and the knowledge to work in the area of finance for a great purpose. All He may wind up doing is dialing back your workaholic tendencies so that you have more time to enjoy your family and study His Word.

But you say you smoke, or drink, or use illegal drugs, and you don't want to give those up. As I stated, you can't give those up under your own power, and the fact that you have tried so many times has proven it to you.

But God knows what is and what is not good for you. Are you willing to allow Him to work in you to change your desires so that you no longer want to smoke, use illegal drugs, or drink nearly as much?

Then you say that you believe God wants to make you a Christian so you can become miserable. Isn't that what most Christians are – miserable? Not the Christians I know, and certainly not me, my wife, or our children.

Where does the Bible say that God wants us miserable? You will not find it. What God wants is for us to be blessed, and that begins when we receive salvation from His hand.

You know, if we would stop and take the time to consider the fact that this life is exceedingly short if we compare it to eternity, we will then realize that there is nothing so important that it should keep us from receiving Jesus as Savior and Lord.

Unfortunately, too many people do not consider the brevity of life. They think they will live forever, or at the very least, they will die when they are really old and gray. That will come too soon. Even though I have just recently turned 54, it still truly seems like yesterday that I was a young boy fishing in the Delaware River near Hobart, New York. There I spent many Saturdays fishing and simply enjoying being outdoors. How did life go by so very quickly? How could that have happened?

It has happened, and I am at a point in life where not only do I realize that this life is short, but I actually look forward to spending eternity with Jesus after this life. Does that sound morbid to you? It shouldn't, because by comparing this life to eternity, we should get a sense of what is truly important.

God does not expect us to become Mother Teresas. He does not necessarily expect us to give up everything and become missionaries in outer Mongolia. What God expects is for us to simply allow Him to change our character as He sees fit.

Over time, we may well find that we have simply stopped swearing without realizing it. Our desire for cigarettes or alcohol has nearly evaporated. Illicit affairs no longer enter the picture.

We also may find that some of the things we want to eliminate in our life become more pronounced. Often the enemy will do this to cause us to focus on something that God is not even doing in our lives at that point. It causes tension, frustration, and self-anger.

If you have gotten to this point in your life and you have not dealt with the question about Jesus, it is about time you do so. You need to stop what you are doing and realize a couple of things before you go through another minute in this life.

- Sinner: you need to realize that you are a sinner. You have sinned and you will continue to sin. Sin is breaking the laws that God has set up. We all sin. We have all broken God's laws and that breaks any connection we might have had with God. Sin pushes us away from Him.

Romans 3:23 says, "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." That means you and that means me. All means all. That is the first step. We need to recognize and agree with God that yes, we are sinners. I'm a sinner. You are a sinner. This results in God's anger, what the Bible terms "wrath."

- God's Wrath: Romans 1:18 says, "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness."

This is as much a fact as the truth that we are all sinners. Because we are sinners – by breaking God's law(s) – God has every right to be angry with us and ultimately destroy that which is sinful. If we choose to remain "in" our sinful states throughout this life, we will – unfortunately – be destroyed with the rest of sin.

Fortunately, there is a remedy, and it is salvation.

- God's Gift: In the sixteenth chapter of Acts, a jailer asks Paul this famous question: what must I do to be saved? The question was asked because Paul and Barnabas had been imprisoned, and while there, they began singing praises to God.

God then sent a powerful earthquake that opened the doors to all the prison cells, yet no one escaped. When the jailer arrived, he saw that everyone was still in their cells, and after seeing that miracle (what prisoner would not want to escape from prison?), turned and asked what he must do to be saved. He was speaking of the spiritual aspect of things. He wanted to know how he could be guaranteed eternal life.

The answer Paul gave the man was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house" (Acts 16:31).

This is not head knowledge or intellectual assent. This is believing from the heart. In fact, Paul makes a very similar statement in another book he wrote, Romans. He says, “That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation” (Romans 10:9-10).

When we fully believe something, we confess that it is true. It must begin in the heart because that is where the will is located. We must want to believe. We must endeavor to believe. We must seek to believe.

We must stop giving ourselves all the reasons to deny or ignore Jesus. As God, He became a Man, born of a virgin. He clothed Himself with humanity that He might show us how to live, and in so doing, would keep every portion of the law.

If Jesus was capable of keeping every portion of the law, then He would be found worthy to become a sacrifice for our sin – yours and mine. If He became a sacrifice for our sin, then all that we must do is embrace Him and His sacrificial death.

In short then, to become saved we must:

1. Admit (we sin)
2. Repent (want to turn away from it)
3. Believe (that Jesus is the answer)
4. Embrace (the truth about Jesus)

We admit that we are sinner, that we have sinned. This is nothing more than agreeing with God that we have broken His law. Can you honestly say that you have not broken God’s law? If you admit to breaking even the “smallest” law, then you are a lawbreaker.

After we admit that we have sinned, the next step is found in repenting. Some believe that repenting is actually moving away from sin. This author believes that it is a willingness to move away from sin, and there is a difference.

As we have already discussed, it is impossible to stop sinning. Human beings simply cannot do it because as long as we live, we will have a sin nature, which is something within us that gives us a propensity to sin. As long as we have this inner propensity to sin or break God's laws, we will never be perfect in this life.

We cannot one day say, "Lord, I promise to stop sinning." If we do that, we are only kidding ourselves and setting ourselves up for major failure. We cannot stop sinning in this life. The most we can do is want to stop sinning and then spend the rest of our lives allowing God to create the character of Jesus within us, slowly, little by little.

Repenting is to decide that you no longer want to do the things that keep us out of heaven. We no longer wish to break God's laws. It is not promising God that we will never sin again.

Once we admit, then repent, we must believe. This is one of the most difficult things to do because believing that Jesus died in our place, that He lived a perfectly sinless life, is extremely difficult to believe. Our minds cannot grasp that truth. We must ask God to open our eyes to that truth so that we can embrace it.

While on the cross next to Jesus, the one thief joined the other thief in ridiculing Jesus. Then, all of a sudden – as we read in Luke 23 – this same thief that had just been ridiculing Him now turned to Him with a new understanding.

It was this new understanding that prompted the thief to say to Jesus, "Lord, remember me when you come into your Kingdom." Jesus looked at the man and responded to him, "Today, you will be with me in paradise."

What had occurred in the mind and heart of that thief from one moment to the next? One thing, and that one thing was that God opened the thief's eyes so that he could see the truth. It was as if the blinders fell off and he now saw and understood who Jesus was, even to the most cursory degree that Jesus was dying not for Himself, but for others.

It was this understanding, this awareness, which prompted the man to ask Jesus to simply be remembered. Jesus went way beyond it to promise the man that he would be with Jesus that day in paradise.

Please notice in Luke 23 that there is nothing in the chapter that tells us that the man promised Jesus he would give up sin, or that he would never sin again. There is nothing that tells us that thief took the time to enter into a final deathbed confession of his sins so that he could be absolved.

The thief made no promises to Jesus at all. What he experienced was the truth of who Jesus was and what Jesus accomplished for humanity. Jesus accomplished what we cannot. What is left is for each person to admit, repent, believe, and embrace.

Let me clarify here that though we do not see any verbal repentance from the thief, we know that he did repent. He admitted as well. How can we know this? It is simply due to the thief's complete about-face with respect to his attitude toward Jesus. One minute, he was ridiculing Jesus, and the next, embracing Him. This is important. There is no way he could have or would have embraced Jesus had he not been humbled by the truth about Jesus.

Once the thief saw the truth, he was instantly humbled. Within himself, he knew that he was a sinner, and in fact the text states that this is what he told the other thief dying next to him. "But the other answering rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss" (Luke 23:40-41). Something happened within the heart of the one thief. In one moment, the thief went from harassing Jesus to recognizing his own sinfulness and then ultimately asking for grace, which was freely given to him.

Whether he said it or not, the thief went from haughtiness to humility in a very short space of time, and it was all because he saw the truth about Jesus. That truth helped him realize that he deserved his death and what would happen to him after death. He understood that Jesus did not deserve death.

From here, the thief fully embraced the truth about Jesus and was rewarded with eternal life because of it. He did not come off the cross to be water baptized. He did not list a long litany of offenses against God. He recognized the truth about Jesus, was humbled, and embraced that truth!

This is what each of us needs to do. We cannot give in to the lie that tells us that we are not good enough, or we have not given up enough before God will accept us. We must reject the lie that says we must somehow earn our salvation.

Jesus has done everything that is necessary to make salvation available to us. The only thing that is left for us is to see the truth. Once we see that truth, it should humble us to the point of embracing Jesus and all that He stands for and is to us.

The eighth chapter of Romans begins with the fact that all who trust Jesus for salvation are no longer condemned...ever. All of my sins – past, present, and future – have not only been forgiven, but canceled. It is because of my faith in the atonement (death) of Jesus that God is able to cancel all of my sins, even the ones that I have not committed yet. This does not make me eager to commit them. It makes me want to do what I can to avoid sinning.

If you do not know Jesus, please do not put down this book without deliberately believing that He is God, that He died for you by the shedding of His blood on the cross, and that He rose three days later because death could not keep Him. Do you believe that? If you do not yet believe it, do you want to believe it? If so, then simply ask God to help you come to believe all that Jesus is and all that He has accomplished for you. God will answer your prayers and you may either receive instantaneous awareness of all that Jesus is and has done, or it may be a growing awareness over time. In either case, it is the most important decision you will ever make.

Turn to Him now and pray for knowledge of the truth and an ability to embrace it. Please. He is waiting for you.

Ask Yourself:

1. Do you know Jesus? Are you in relationship with Him? Have you had a spiritual transaction according to John 3?
2. Do you want to receive eternal life through the only salvation that is available?
3. Do you believe that Jesus is God the Son, who was born of a virgin, lived a sinless life, died a bloody and gruesome death to pay for your sin, was buried, and rose again on the third day? Do you believe this?
4. Do you want to embrace the truth from #3?
5. Pray that God will open your eyes and provide you with the faith to begin believing the truth about Jesus. Ask Him to help your faith embrace the truth, realizing that you are not good enough to save yourself and that your sin will keep you out of God's Kingdom without His salvation.
6. Pray as if your life depended upon it because it does!
7. If you have prayed to receive Jesus as Savior and Lord, please write to me. I want to send you some materials at no charge or obligation. Write to me at fred_deruvo@hotmail.com and sign up for our free bimonthly newsletter at www.studygrowknow.com

The main navigation menu on the left includes links to Home, About, Resources, Blog, Books (All), Books, Books2, Books3, Donate, Contact, and Our Doctrinal Statement. The central content area highlights a radio broadcast titled "CHRISLAM" by Fred DeRuvo, with a "Now Available!" banner. To the right, there's a section for "Behind the Enemy Lines" and a list of "Newest Study-Grow-Know Ministries" including "Joseph Before Pharaoh", "Joseph Ignored", "Joseph's Metamorphosis", "God Controls Outcomes", and "Christians and Politics". A sidebar on the right promotes an iPhone app. The footer contains a newsletter sign-up form, contact information for Hannah, and a list of social media links.
